Around the Death Bed Commandments Boiled Down

Mr. Hillquit Is Wrong

T. F. Ryan in Diamonds

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1922, by Star Co.)

The Genoa Conference begins work. First will come organizing, while important men privately discuss what, if anything, they can do.

The conference is like a gathering of surgeons around the bedside of a dying man. "Shall we operate? How shall we operate? Will he survive a major operation? Will he live if we don't operate?"

Such are the questions at Genoa. The patient is Europe, the head doctor is Lloyd George. The principal diseased spots are Russia and Germany. There are a dozen others.

The Episcopal Church suggests boiling down the Ten Commandments for the sake of brevity. They seem well boiled down already. But everything, no matter how condensed, can be condensed still more. For real brevity you might get along with two Commandments:

First Commandment—Be just.

Second Commandment—Don't be a fool.

The just man would not commit murder or steal. Nobody but a fool would envy his neighbor's wife or commit crimes that would make him suffer. The just man would honor his father and mother, remembering what he owes them.

No man, unless he were a fool, would take the name of God in vain, for whatever his own belief, he would not insult the belief of others.

Only a fool would fail to rest on the Sabbath day. The Episcopal authorities suggest shortening the last Commandment to "Thou shalt not covet." In the space saved by condensation they might add a few words on the difference between covetousness and ambition. Don't covet your neighbor's ox, but have enough ambition to go out and get an ox of your own.

Mr. Hillquit, Socialist leader of New York State, one of the most able, a really educated man, forgets history when he advocates "taking over the government and exhibitions workers for professional politicians."

Professional politicians are bad enough, but "workers" would be worse. They know it. Nobody knows better than Mr. Hillquit that every career requires training, also that for everything worth while you require trained minds back of you. Mr. Hillquit is a successful lawyer, representing the greatest coal selling concern, because his ancestors in Russia and elsewhere have been THINKING for ten, two or three thousand years.

You can't learn to think in one generation or in three. Many workers have great ability undeveloped. But generally speaking, the man that is capable of running a nation soon gets out of being a workman, he moves up into the capitalistic class.

A big world-wide "diamond corner" is born. Ninety-five per cent of all diamond production is united in one trust, to regulate sales and "stabilize prices" which means holding back diamonds to keep up the price.

In that diamond wood pile there is an American personage, and his name is Thomas F. Ryan. Years ago, when nobody else thought of it, he bought from the King of Belgium, in his African territories, diamond hunting rights to the tune of thousands of square miles. These he has been stripping diamonds for years—recently by flying machines.

Tobacco men will tell you that Mr. Ryan probably "got his" in the diamond corner. They remember when he went into tobacco, modestly and diffidently, with little trust of his own, and came out well rewarded. William C. Whitney used to say that Ryan would be the richest man in the world. Later Ryan said that Davison, of Morgan & Co., would be a very rich man. But Davison for the moment is out of it, and Ryan is still forming "diamond corners."

What is in a name? A new church, generally known as "Mr. Rockefeller's Church," to open on Park avenue, New York city. If Europeans read that yesterday the first sermon was preached by a man named "Little Wolf," they would say, "How interesting that a native Indian should preach in the church of the world's richest man." He wasn't a native Indian. The preacher's name was Dr. Woelfkin. That means little wolf in German.

Mr. Rockefeller, Jr., talking to his Bible class in the new home, told the young men his father had succeeded because he had attended to "one thing at a time." That is a good thing for young people to remember. One thing at a time means many things in due time.

WILD WOMEN AID GUNMEN

Held on 22 Blackmail Charges

GANG USED GIRLS AS HOLDUP DECOYS

Middlesex County Bandits, Police Say, Have Amazing Organization for Lawbreaking

"Wild women," carefully recruited from dance halls, cabarets and similar resorts, by the leaders of the Middlesex County bandit gang, accompanied every holdup or pay roll robbery expedition planned by the band, according to Cambridge detectives at work on the situation revealed by the shooting of Patrolman Francis J. Philbrick, and the arrest of Earl "Tug" Wilson, Gil Crosby and pretty Sarah Frances Doyle.

Further elevations came thick and fast today, when District Attorney Endicott F. Saltonstall, convinced that he had a serious situation to deal with, put every available detective in Cambridge and Somerville on the job and called in the aid of a number of State detectives.

It soon developed that the gang said to number fifteen men and girls, is the most carefully organized and highly developed band of "stick up" men, "strong arms," burglars, blackmailers and auto thieves the police ever have had to grapple with.

Every precaution was taken against capture or discovery. The "brains" of the gang had prepared for all emergencies. Hiding places were arranged in Somerville, Watertown, Boston and Providence.

SECRET CODE.

Each of these was equipped with telephones, most of which were not listed in the telephone book.

In addition a carefully thought out secret code had been prepared by which members of the gang could

FLOATING MINE DRIFTS OUT OF STEAMER LANE

Lieutenant Commander Brown of the Boston branch of the Hydrographic Office today reported that the floating mine seen in the North Atlantic shipping lanes has drifted far to the south and east and is no longer a menace to vessels. It will probably drift into that mysterious region known as the Sargasso Sea.

FOUR KILLED IN WESTERN STORMS

Kansas City, Mo., April 11.—Four deaths were reported today in storms in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma. Rivers and streams continued bank full and lowlands were still inundated. High winds demoralized wire communication and reached cyclonic intensity.

Western Kansas was battling against the worst April snowstorm in its history today. Railroad plows were bucking snowdrifts six to twelve feet deep between here and the Colorado line.

FRENCH SAY GERMANS FORFEIT CONCESSIONS

Paris, April 11 (By Associated Press).—Discussion of Germany's reply rejecting some of the conditions of the Allies for the partial moratorium on reparations was on the program of today's meeting of the reparations commission. The attitude of the French officials is that the Germans, having rejected the conditions for the partial moratorium, the concessions previously made as to reparations payment are no longer applicable.

GETS 2 YEARS IN RECKLESS AUTO DRIVING

"Stiff Jail Sentences Only Cure" for Cars "Running Wild," Says Judge Sullivan

The maximum lower court sentence for operating an automobile so as to endanger the lives of pedestrials was given Ivan Rhodes, 23 years old, of Avon street, Wakefield, by Judge Sullivan in Charlestown Court today.

Rhodes was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction. He appealed and was held in $1,000.

"Autos are running wild," said Judge Sullivan in passing sentence. "There is only one cure and that is stiff jail sentences."

Rhodes, police charged, tried to beat the drawer in crossing Warren Bridge, Charlestown, on March 29, striking Bridge o'Under Thomas J. Gillespie and injury him so badly he will be confined to the hospital for another month.

In Somerville court David A. Frerst, 29 years old, of Elm Hill Park, Roxbury, was fined $25 for driving too near a stopped trolley car. He appealed and was held in $200 bail. Police Lieutenant James M. Haraon testified Frerst had grazed him as he stepped from a car in Elm street, West Somerville.

"He was not only inside the eight feet allowed by law, but going at a high rate of speed," the police official said.

POLICE DOG CAPTURES THIEF

"Bodie Boy" Leads Pursuers Through Back Yards in Somerville

With "Bodie Boy," a police dog, leading the chase, Mathew T. Granan, forty-two years old, was run down and captured at gun point by Somerville police officers in a house on Warren avenue, that city, today.

Granan was charged with stealing a suit of clothes from the tailor shop of Harry Bornstein, No. 302 Somerville avenue. He was held in $500 bonds for a hearing Thursday. Meantime, his past record will be investigated.

Following Granan's arrest, Inspector Shanda and Sergeant Lynch visited the prisoner's room and seized alleged stolen loot valued at $500. The property included a number of women's gowns, toilet articles and druggists' supplies.

Granan entered the shop today, explaining he had a pair of trousers to repair. He handed a package to Bornstein and then started out. Near the door he snatched up a suit of clothes from a bench and bolted into Union square.

Bornstein darted in pursuit, shouting "Thief." His cries attracted the attention of Police Chief Charles A. Kendall, Lieutenant Michael P. Kennedy and Patrolmen John Kilourhy, all standing in the square. The police dog, owned by the chief, was frisking nearby.

At sight of the fleeing Granan the officers at once joined Bornstein in the chase. Chief Kendall paused just long enough to his his dog.

"After him, Boy," he commanded. "Go, Boy, go."

Like a flash "Bodie Boy" was away in the van of the chase. A score of civilians promptly joined.

Granan, the fleet dog gaining on him rapidly, sprinted down a side street and jumped a fence. The dog followed, taking the barrier with a graceful leap. Then ensued a thrilling pursuit through a number of back yards and other side streets, with Granan vainly trying to elude his canine "Nemesis."

With the dog but a few feet behind him Granan finally dashed into the doorway of a house on Warren avenue, slamming the door in the dog's face. A few moments later Chief Kendall and the other pursuers came racing into view.

They found the dog standing in front of the door and barking loudly. With pistols drawn the officers crashed in the door and found Granan hiding under a stairway. He surrendered without resistance.

At the station fifteen pawn tickets were found in his pockets. The police believe he is wanted in New York and other States for a series of thefts.

He has been living on Stone avenue, Somerville, but a few days.

CHILD'S FOOT CRUSHED BETWEEN TWO CARS

Margaret Myott, eight years old, daughter of Mrs. L. J. Myott of Devere street, Quincy, had a narrow escape from death today when her right foot became caught between two cars of a New Haven train as it was leaving the Quincy station. The child was saved from falling from the train by a brakeman. Her foot was crushed.

FLOWERS SENT TO PIERCE

Assorted Vegetables Also Sent to Jurist, Delivery Man Testifies

Evidence that Supreme Court Justice Edward P. Pierce was presented with roses worth at least $1,000 during a period of six months and that a so-called "free list" was maintained at the Wahan Rose Conservatories was given today at the legislative hearing on a petition to remove the judge for alleged official misconduct.

Other testimony was that the judge received holiday gifts of baskets of roses valued at $25 each and also that he was occasionally presented with "assorted boxes" of vegetables.

This testimony, along with a ruling denying witness in the case immunity from possible criminal proceedings later on, a mysterious visit made to the spring by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen featured the day's session.

The "free list" bobbed up in the testimony of James A. Cartwright, general sales manager of the conservatories. He stated that in addition to the judge's name it contained the following names:

President John H. H. McNamee of the closed Prudential Trust Company.

Louis K. Morse, Riverbank road Brookline.

C. F. Anderson, president of the Anderson Coal Company.

A Mr. Bailey.

The latter was "thought to be another official of the Prudential Trust Company."

Six roses were introduced as samples of the high quality flowers the judge is alleged to have received as gifts from the conservatories.

These roses were displayed by Attorney George M. Poland, chief counsel for the petitioners.

He described them as "Ophelia," "Hadley," Mrs. Charles Russell," and "Pilgrim" roses. All were long stemmed.

"Who paid for those?" asked Attorney Herbert Parker, of Pierce's counsel.

DOLLAR APIECE.

"I did," returned Attorney Poland. "I just wanted the committee to see what nice roses they grow out there. They won't cost the conservatories a cent."

Cartwright testified that the holiday gifts were made on Easter, Thanksgiving Day and at Christmas. He said the price of the roses varied from sixty cents to one dollar apiece. He added that they were usually delivered in baskets. One of these baskets, he said cost $5.

Orders for these deliverys were always given by Elmer. The latter's card accompanied each gift. On one occasion witness said he had to carry the roses to Pierce's house himself as they "were too big" to place in the delivery auto.

Many of the roses had stems from thirty-three to thirty-six inches long. As a rule Elmer personally selected the choice blooms sent the judge on holiday occasions.

Some of the more expensive gifts were made during the great flower shortage in 1917 and 1918.

'DEATH PARTY' GUEST FOOLED BY SUITOR

Cosskio Girl Divorced Handsome Blonde Tailor Who Posed as Wealthy Man

That Ona Cosskie, the only woman guest at Pauline Virginia Clark's "death party" at No. 282 Newbury street, when the Back Bay beauty drank a fatal draught of poison, had herself been the principal of a blasted romance came to light through search of official records today.

Although the handsome Worcester girl, who came into the limelight through the double suicide of Miss Clark and Otto Haldar Larsen, the Norwegian Tech student, is generally known as Miss Ona Cosskie, she has been married and divorced. She was granted the right to her maiden name.

Her husband, Gustaf E. Ericson, was for some time one of the most spectacular figures in the Back Bay, and the brief romance of the girl and Ericson is still a topic of conversation in certain Back Bay hotels.

WHIRLWIND COURTSHIP.

Those who knew the couple say that their marriage followed a whirlwind courtship, during which Ericson convinced Miss Cosskie that he was a man of means. He was a tailor, and at various times kept shops in various parts of the Back Bay. His extreme tastes in dress, his physique and, his blonde hair made him a conspicuous figure.

Ericson always spoke of his wife, even to his lawyers, as a wealthy society woman.

FRANCIS DUGGAN SEIZED

Husband of "Teddy" Taken in Custody Upon Arrival Here From Panama

Francis Duggan, husband of Theresa Duggan and jointly indicted with her attorney, Harry Levenson, and others on blackmail charges, was arrested today upon his return from Panama, where he had been employed as butcher in a hotel.

Duggan was placed in custody by Inspector John Mitchell and State Detective Frank Hale, who had been hunting for him for months. He was taken to the office of District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien and arraigned before Judge Keating in Superior Criminal Court.

He entered a plea of not guilty to twenty-two counts of conspiracy and extortion from divers persons in connection with the blackmail activities of Attorney William J. Corcoran's gang and was admitted, to $5,500 bail.

Duggan was represented by counsel. He went to his home in Washington street, Somerville, after his appearance in court. Inspector Mitchell and State Detective Hale searched for Duggan in New Haven and New York last Fall. The trail was lost in New Haven.

Duggan appeared cheerful and healthy. He said the weather was getting uncomfortably hot in Panama, so he gave up his job and came home.

Duggan's wife, Theresa, was arraigned several months ago on the same day that Attorney William J. Corcoran was arraigned on similar charge. Officers Mitchell and Hale, who are specially assigned to the office of Attorney-General Allen has now rounded up practically all of the Alleged blackmailers indicted as a result of evidence offered before the Suffolk Grand Jury by Assistant Attorney Generals Hurwitz and Goldberg.

It was expected that trial of the blackmail cases in Superior Criminal Court will start after the disbarment cases against Daniel H. Coakley, former District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier and other lawyers have been disposed of. The case against Coakley is scheduled to begin in Supreme Court next Monday.

There was lively speculation today as to the course to be pursued by Coakley. In some quarters it was predicted that Coakley would fight the Boston Bar Association charges with spirit and act as his own counsel, but in other circles the impression was strong that the State would offer evidence as in the Pelletier trial and that no defence would be offered by Coakley or Pelletier in the disbarment cases.

Season's First Straw Hat Appears at Headquarters

The 1922 straw hat season was rushed with a running jump today.

An unidentified young man, dressed in a neat gray suit, and adorned with a very natty straw, beglrt with a brown ribbon, stepped into police headquarters to ask for Inspector Thomas F. Gleavy.

Inspector Gleavy was out, and the youth turned to depart through Pemberton square.

Appearance of the straw hat drew a number of stenographers to the windows of Barristers' Hall and the Court House, murmuring wondering and admiring comments.

ARRESTED IN BACK BAY AS BOND THIEF

Clerk Found in Hotel Suite Charged With Theft of $1,800 in Securities

Lodged in a suite at the Hotel Greyfind on Charlesgate West in the Back Bay, Edward J. Smith, twenty-five years old, was arrested today by Inspectors Haggerty and Farrell of the bank squad charged with stealing $1,800 worth of securities from Paine, Webber & Co., brokers.

Smith was employed in the brokerage house on Devonshire street as a bond clerk for some months. About ten days ago there was a reorganization and Smith was dismissed.

Shortly after this, accounts discovered a shortage in the firm's books. Detectives were called in, and the shortage is alleged to have been traced to Smith.

The missing bonds are said to have included Liberty Bonds and other negotiable securities.

EMERY MUST DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

New Trial Denied Massachusetts Man Convicted of Murder in Philadelphia

Philadelphia, April 11.—Perley J. Emery, alias James Hastings, of Sterling, Mass., must die in the electric chair for the murder of Vincine Hanley, a park guard, at Seventeenth street and the Parkway, in November, 1921.

Chief Justice Von Maschzisker in Supreme Court has dismissed Emery's appeal for a new trial. The date of execution will be set by the Governor.

Emery and William M. Presente, of Boston, were stopped by Hanley, who expected that the car they were driving had been stolen.

At his trial Emery testified he did not remember having fired the shot that killed Hanley. He declared he had been "full of whiskey and the drugs," and did not know what he was doing.

When arrested Emery gave the name of Hastings and said he came from Vermont, where he had been a farmer and herdsman.

Presente testified he had come to Philadelphia on private business for State Senator William H. McDonald of Massachusetts, and met Emery by chance in a poolroom. It was Emery, he declared, who suggested an automobile ride. He testified Emery fired the shot which killed the park guard.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., April 11.—Rose Gorubsin, fourteen years old, a high school student, has been asleep at the home of her parents for three weeks. Attending doctors cannot advance a cause for her long slumber.

Dr. W. L. Draper, the family physician, asserted the girl is not a victim of sleeping sickness, but believed the strange disease caused by overstudy.

Harry J. Porter, Pullman car conductor on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad, was today held in $1,000 for a hearing in one week on a charge of stealing $140 worth of railroad tickets.

He was arraigned in Municipal Court. Railroad investigators charged a wholesale theft of tickets in Pullman trains out of Boston had led to an investigation. Porter's arrest following.

The thefts, it was charged, were made possible by persons boarding trains at the Back Bay station, surrendering their tickets to Pullman car conductors. At the South Station the tickets are collected at the train entrances.

SALTONSTALL TO CLEAN UP GUNMEN

communicate with other members, even in the presence of an outsider, and do it unsuspected.

Secret signs, pass words and cabalistic marks were part of this code and used when occasion warranted.

According to detective today when Miss Doyle was arrested and taken to a cell for safe keeping pending an examination, a message was conveyed to her that she was "to keep a stiff upper lip and she would be taken care of."

The messenger proved his identity and won her confidence by giving one of the code signs arranged for such an emergency.

The district attorney, while admitting today that he is bending every effort to run down the other members of the gang, refused to discuss the situation, saying the time is not ripe.

CLEAN UP GANG.

He admitted, however, that he expects "sensational disclosures" within a short time.

He also expected to make a number of arrests in his effort to clean up the gangsters infesting Middlesex County. The raid of the Cambridge police on the "spooners" and "gunmen" of Fresh Pond boulevard was, he admitted, but the first of a number of similar raids.

Attorney John F. Tobin, Jr., counsel for 'Sally' Doyle visited his client in the Cambridge jail today, but refused to talk about the visit.

The girl is showing "the effects of the strain she had been under and appears much broken.

She refused to eat the prison food and obtained permission to send out to a near by restaurant for a shrimp salad, bread and butter and a cup of coffee.

Partial confession made to District Attorney Saltonstall by "Sally" Doyle, in which the veil was torn from a sordid underworld romance, and a dim light allowed to play over the secrets of the bandit gang of which Wilson is alleged to have been a leader, today led the district attorney to start trying to link the gang with many of the score or more recent payroll robberies and "stick-ups" in the vicinity of Boston.

The positive identification of "Tug" Wilson by John Murphy, former service man and bank messenger for the Somerville Trust Company, as the man who held up the bank auto and stole $3,300 in cash and checks, was the first positive clue the police were able to get on any of Wilson's activities.

Wilson has done two terms in Cambridge jail for breaking and entering, and is under indictment in Charlestown for the part he is alleged to have played in the beating and robbing of John Parker, an aged Hayes square grocer.

But the story revealed by Sally Doyle to District Attorney Saltonstall, while it was told reluctantly and failed to disclose many things the police believe she knows, illuminated some of the dark secrets of the gang.

Saltonstall said today that later he expected to have the girl brought again to his office and there question her more searchingly on some of the hitherto mysterious phases of the inner workings of the band.

It is practically certain, it was said, that the gang is one of the most carefully organized and astutely managed "crime corporations" that ever operated in this Commonwealth.

It has not confined its attention to the more daring offences such as holdups and burglaries. One of its activities has been the robbing and otherwise mulcting by means of blackmail, married men, caught with "flappers" spooning in dark places on the Middlesex roads.

It was this phase of the matter that led the Cambridge police to stage one of the most sensational raids of recent times. Four officers disguised as "spooners" and "flappers" went to the Fresh Pond boulevard.

There, while six other officers in uniform hid in the near bushes, the trap for the gunmen was laid.

EIGHT RELEASED.

When the raid was over ten young men had been arrested. Eight of these were allowed to go, but two were held, charged with carrying dangerous weapons. They gave their names as Ronald E. Feeney of Park road, Belmont, and William F. Gruhn of Holworthy street, Cambridge.

Special Officer Charles Mallahan was dressed in feminine finery, with him was Lieutenant Thomas Colyer. Special Officer John Nollan also dressed as a woman and Chief Clerk Edward Maher went in another car.

Behind them went the police auto patrol with the uniformed officers.

Other raids of a similar nature are expected to follow, although neither Saltonstall nor the Cambridge police officials would discuss their plans today.

SENT TO ATLANTA FOR SALES OF NARCOTICS

Joseph Conte of Paris street, East Boston, was sentenced today in the Federal Court to two years in Atlanta Penitentiary for unlawfully selling one deck of morphine and two decks of cocaine.

SHOEWORKERS IN LYNN FACE LOCKOUT

200 Factories Factories Employing 20,000 Affected by Clash Over Wages

A lockout in 200 Lynn shoe factories that would throw 20,000 men out of work was forecasted today when it became known that employers and workers' representatives cannot agree on new wage and working terms.

The so-called "peace agreement," under which the factories have been operating for months, expires April 30.

The Lynn Shoe Manufacturers' Association today let it be known that they would not renew the agreement.

PREPARE FOR FIGHT.

Leaders of the United Shoe Workers of America are making extensive preparations for a long shutdown. Weekly assessments are being collected to provide for families of the workers.

It is planned to open a number of commissary stores to sell food and provisions to strikers at cost.

Definite information that a deadlock had been reached in the negotiations between operators and workers came when the Manufacturers' Association issued its reply to the workers' communication, in which the men offered to accept a fifteen per cent. wage reduction.

The employers reject this reduction and demand one of 20 per cent.

They also call for a uniform working week of fifty hours, ask a heavier pay cut for unskilled workers, and insist that the system under which a man cannot be hired without a union permit be done away with.

GREAT LOCKOUT SEEN.

Representative of the United Shoe Workers of America declare acceptance of these demands would wreck their union, and assert they will not consider them.

The help also offered to work a forty-five hour week for half the year, and a forty-hour week for the remainder of the twelve-month period.

Both sides declare a settlement before the present agreement expires is impossible.

It is freely predicted the lockout will be even greater than the big one of 1917, which was finally settled through arbitration by the late Henry B. Endicott.

FOUND DYING ON FLOOR IN CAMBRIDGE

James Saunders, fifty-six years old, of No. 14 Edgeworth street, Roxbury, a night watchman employed at the F. H. Dow Candy Factory, 716 Main street, Cambridge, was found dying on the floor of the factory early today by Patrolman Denis O'Brien of the Central square station. O'Brien had the man removed to the Mount Auburn hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Saunders had been suffering from acute indigestion earlier in the night, according to friends, with whom he had talked.

2 GET PLACES IN CITY HEALTH DEPARTMENT

Vacancies created in the City Health Department by the dismissal of two constables last week, who were discharged at the same time that six patrolmen were sent back to other duties, were today filled by Mayor James M. Curley. The Mayor appointed Philip Berwin of No. 450 Columbus avenue, South End, and James F. Nevinne, of No. 24 Prescott street, Charlestown, to fill these positions. The former incumbents were Bernard J. Brennan, whose brother, former Senator Brennan of Charlestown, was an ardent Murphy supporter in the mayoralty campaign, and James H. Graham.

CURLEY VETOES ORDER TO REPAIR PLAYGROUND

Mayor James M. Curley today vetoed the councilmanic order calling for a $100,000 loan order to repair the Christopher J. Lee playground on M street, South Boston. He said his veto was due to failure of the council to rescind the order for $340,000 for the gymnasium at Broadway and C street, South Boston.

Springfield, April 11.—A flood crest of twenty-two feet in the Connecticut River, the highest in several years, passed White River Junction, Vt., and the lower reaches of the river rose today to new high points for this season, flooding lowlands at many points.

Government flood warnings predict the highest water since 1915.

CHILD BALL PLAYER INJURED BY AUTO

While playing ball in the street near his home, Ernest Williams, eight years old, of No. 48 Winchester street, South End, was struck by an automobile owned and operated by George F. Jefferys of No. 1255 Commonwealth avenue. He is in City Hospital with concussion of the brain and contusions.

HIGH SUNDAY AND HOLIDAY FARE ON NANTASKET LINE FOUGHT

UNIFORM RATE IS SOUGHT

Hearing on Representative Kelley's Bill Featured by Attack on Fitzgerald

Charges that the high rates of fare levied on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays deprive thousands of poor people and their children from enjoying the State reservation established at Nantasket by public funds were made today by Assistant Corporation Counsel H. Murray Pakulski at the hearing before the State Department of Public Utilities.

"Boston pays in excess of 60 per cent. of the cost of maintaining the State reservation at Nantasket," said Pakulski, "but its use and enjoyment is confined almost entirely to the so-called better class.

"On a Saturday, Sunday or holiday you will not find the average or poorer citizen there. He is denied the privilege by the excessive fare.

ACCUSES FITZGERALD.

"This department should investigate and determine whether it is not the definite policy of the company to keep Nantasket exclusive. There is no existing right to exclude anyone from State property."

The hearing was held on Representative Coleman R. Kelley's petition to compel an adjustment of the Nantasket rates. Kelley said the company sells a commuters' ticket at 13½ cents a ride, while charging for a single trip 33 cents on week days and 50 cents on Sundays and holidays.

Kelley said that Saturdays, Sundays and holidays are the occasions particularly open to the working people and their children.

Joseph A. Cahalan, a City Hall employe, charged that "underhand political methods" have been adopted by the company to prevent, face to ductions. He said that when he made an attempt to break down the rates schedule in 1917, "a man that they thought could handle me was sent by the company to threaten me." He said the man referred to was former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald.

COMPANY'S REASON.

Representatives William R. Lancaster and Hugh Campbell of Boston and Lawson of Quincy, in behalf of the department that the people of their district are especially interested in the effort to compel the company to establish a single rate of fares for all days.

Attorney Barnes, representing the company, said the corporation has always been especially interested to render service to the public. A fare schedule offers many difficulties, he said. He told the department that the Nantasket carried 15,000 children free last Summer. Older children have invariably been carried at reduced fares, he said.

He said the company is earning only a reasonable dividend on its investment, that it aims to give good service and that the higher fare was established on holidays in order to encourage women and children to visit the reservation on week days in avoidance of the holiday rush.

Mrs. MacKellar, Winner of $100,000 Alimony, to Study Singing

Mother and Daughter Going Abroad to Prepare for Operatic Careers Under Masters

If you had alimony of more than $100,000, what would you do?

Mrs. Marie Alice MacKellar, ex-wife of Thomas MacKellar, wealthy Boston clubman, of No. 1082 Commonwealth avenue, whose divorce suit, recently settled out of court, brings to herself and her twelve-year-old daughter, Marie C. MacKellar, now in a Newton convent, an amount over $100,000, today told her plans.

"As yet I do not know the exact amount involved in the settlement of the suit," explained Mrs. MacKellar, an exceptionally beautiful woman, when seen at her home, No. 15 St. Luke's road, Brighton, by a Boston American reporter.

Her apartment is just around the corner from the palatial suite of her husband, whom she charged with deserting her in Calgary, Alberta, in 1914.

Mrs. MacKellar, according to the terms of the settlement, effected through her attorney, William C. Calnan, Public Commissioner of Boston, receives $25,000 cash alimony, $25,000 from his interest in the estate of his millionaire father, the late Thomas MacKellar of Philadelphia, and half the residue of her husband's share in the estate after he has received $25,000. It is because of this last clause that the exact amount she will receive is in doubt.

FATHER LEFT $1,250,000.

"Undoubtedly my daughter and I will receive a good deal more than $100,000," continued Mrs. MacKellar.

"Mr. MacKellar's father left an estate of more than $1,250,000, to be divided among several heirs. Until the division has taken place it is impossible to say just how much we will get."

Mrs. MacKellar talked freely today of her plans for her little daughter and herself.

"I plan to go abroad in August to continue my vocal lessons. At present I am studying under a Boston teacher. In Italy I shall become a pupil of Sig. Arcona, formerly with the Chicago Opera Company, if I intend to take up a career on the concert stage.

"I shall take my daughter with me. She will study singing under the leading European teachers, while I am completing my own studies. I look forward to a career in opera for her. Of course, she is just at the time when if she is to make a success in that field she must have every opportunity for study under the best masters."

STAR OF SHOW.

"The biggest thing I ever figured in was the Y. D. show, which ran for a week at the Shubert Theatre last Summer," she said. "I took the leading female role, and the Boston critics, both dramatic and musical, were gracious enough to praise my voice."

Mrs. MacKellar was born in Brookline. She is the daughter of the late Charles Crosby Allen, treasurer and general manager of one of the largest terminal companies. Before her marriage she was prominent in Brookline and Newton society and even then took an active part in amateur theatrical productions.

CURLEY HOPES TO BE GOVERNOR IN FOUR YEARS

Makes Announcement Again on Welcoming Civil War Army Nurses

Mayor James M. Curley again made public announcement of his intention to become governor when his term as mayor is over, in an address at a reception tendered by the G. A. R. of Massachusetts to three members of the War Nurses Association of Massachusetts.

The guests of honor, Mrs. Fannie T. Hazen of No. 81 Oxford street, Cambridge, president of the Association; Mrs. Mary E. Smith, of No. 116 Congress street, Lowell, vice president of the organization, and Mrs. Susan C. Mills of Haverhill, are three of the nine surviving civil war army nurses of this state. The reception was a feature of the G. A. R. state convention.

In his address, which followed a short one by Governor Cox, Mayor Curley said:

"I am more than glad to be able to shake the hands of women who did so much for the Union soldiers. I hope that I shall be able to greet you again next year as your Mayor, and the two years following that. I also hope I shall be able to welcome you four years from now as your Governor."

Mayor Curley presented a bouquet of red, white and blue flowers tied in red, white and blue ribbon, to each of the three honor guests.

LIFE OF BOY IS CUT SHORT BY TRUCK

Lad of Six Run Down on Cambridge Street; Body at Hospital

He's curly-headed, there's a smile on his face but he's dead.

Just a kiddie with overalls and khaki coat playing in the street. He didn't hear the automobile signal and was killed.

Somebody's heart's going to be heavy. Somebody's going to miss that smile. Somebody's going to miss the tug of the little arms when they say good night "gimme a hug." Somebody's going to miss the laugh as golden as the hair.

The body is in the Middlesex Hospital.

Nurses cried when doctors softly said he had "gone."

Such a regular looking youngster, too. Probably six.

Somebody had planned a trip to school with him. Going to take him into classroom for the first time. Then plod home with a heavy heart because they had to leave him behind.

Now all they can do is finger the little overalls with blurred eyes, fondle the khaki jacket and recall how he looked when he toddled to play.

Just now he's the "Little Unknown," but probably before many hours some sad father and mother will learn the news and another house will know the ache of silence that follows the laugh of a child forever stilled.

The accident occurred on Cambridge street. The driver of the truck did all he could. He cannot give back the laugh, or the folks their baby.

ATTRIBUTE BOMBINGS TO WAGE AWARD FIGHT

Chicago, April 11 (By International News Service).—A campaign of terrorism against contractors actively supporting the Landis wage award was believed today to have been instigated with the bombing of the homes of two plumbing contractors. The men attacked are two of the five plumbing contractors who are members of the citizens' committee, organized to enforce the Landis award. The three other members, it was said, have received anonymous threats. Wages of almost all classes of building workmen were reduced by the decision of Judge K. M. Landis.

'KISSING PARTY' SET DESERTED BY MORRILL

Divorce Trial Postponement Gives Girls Expose Respite

Leon Gordon Morrill, ink manufacturer and Brookline clubman, who charges his pretty wife, Florence R., with improper relations with Seth K. Chase, former lieutenant-colonel in the U. S. Air Service, and Douglas S. Carter, has deserted the Brookline and Boston smart sets.

Morrill's reported desertion of the "set" for a new circle of friends has caused an added stir in the new famous Morrill divorce tangle, which was continued until April 24 because of conflict with the criminal session at the Dedham Superior Court.

Members of the set with whom Morrill mixed, including married and single society girls who were among the select few at bridge parties in Morrill's rooms at the Hotel Castilian and subsequent dinners at roadside inns, seem to be about evenly divided upon the loss of his companionship.

Some smile knowingly and say they are not in the least disturbed over this new development. Others are reported to be piqued that Morrill should take up with a new set during the trial.

RESPITE FROM EXPOSE.

Postponement of the trial is a relief to the younger girl habitues of the "kissing parties" conducted by Morrill. They frankly admit it. While they aver they cannot by any stretch of imagination be named as among the "kiss-ees," they pouting-ly declare that just the same they have no desire to have their names broadcasted through the newspapers simply because they happened to be attendants at these affairs.

The identity of these girls will be demanded when Morrill again takes the stand for cross-examination before counsel made this clear today. Efforts of participants and parents to stop this line of inquiry will be of no avail.

Throughout three consecutive days of ruthless cross-examination by a notable array of counsel, Morrill has remained smiling and urbane, despite declaration of opposing counsel that he has made important changes in his original testimony.

EXPULSION BY CLUBS.

Present gossip among the officials and members of exclusive clubs of which the plaintiff, defendant and co-respondents are members may lead to formal "ousting" orders. Feeling ran so high in one organization that certain members desired to act immediately after counsel prevailed and the situation will remain until the trial is completed and decision rendered.

Both sides have their staunch friends. Each day the home of Mrs. Morrill's parents in Brookline, where the attractive defendant and her children are residing, is filled with flowers sent by sympathizers and friends.

Mayor Curley has saved the city more than $17,000 over last year on contracts for oil to be used by the street cleaning and oiling service of the Public Works Department. This was made known today when bids were opened and awarded for 450,000 gallons of 45 per cent. asphaltic road oil and 50,000 gallons of 60 per cent. asphaltic road oil. This is the saving of more than $7,250 over the price that the State will pay for the same kind of oil for its service.

their marriage license in Worcester in April, 1916, but were married in Boston. According to the return on the license the ceremony was performed by Rev. Herbert Handel.

Following their marriage, the couple resided at the Copley-Plaza and Westminster hotels in this city, and cut quite a swath among the habitues of these hostelries.

EXPOSED AS IMPECUNIOUS.

According to allegations made by Miss Cosskie in applying for a divorce, their married life was "all applesauce." She alleged that the dressy, handsome tailor, who at the meantime had been revealed to her as more or less impecunious, was cruel and abusive in Worcester in 1918.

She also charged him with intoxication, and with neglecting to provide for her.

While his "rich society wife" was filing these allegations, Ericson was having troubles of his own with the police. He was brought to police headquarters, charged with forgery on two counts by means of worthless checks.

Inspector McCarthy was forced to go looking for him and bring him in again, when he defaulted his bail on these charges. He was finally convicted and placed on probation in September, 1919, promising to make restitution.

SUIT UNCONTESTED.

May 8, 1919, according to records of the Suffolk County Superior Court, his wife entered suit for divorce. The action was uncontested and she was given a decree nisi, with the right to resume her maiden name October 21, 1919.

To the Boston lawyer he retained when arrested on the bad check charges, Ericson promised that his wife, "a rich society girl," as he claimed, would pay the attorney his fee. The attorney admitted today that he has not seen Ericson nor his wife since.

SARGENT HOME FROM VISIT IN EUROPE

John Singer Sargent, the artist, whose picture, "The Synagogue," in the Boston Public Library has given offence to persons of the Jewish faith, arrived in Boston today on the Leyland line steamship Winifredian from Liverpool. Asked if he had any comment to make on the furor created by his portrayal of the Synagogue as an old beldame seated amidst the ruins of a temple, he replied in a London accent:

"Oh, dear, no. I know nothing about it."

Neither would he discuss his plans for the future, nor the report that he intends to spend the remainder of his life in Boston. He was accompanied by his sister, Miss Emily Sargent, and they left the ship together to go to the home of Professor C. S. Sargent in Brookline. From friends of the artist it was learned that he intends to retouch some of his pictures in the Widener Memorial Library at Harvard and at the Boston Public Library.

WOMAN SLAIN BY RIPPER IN NEW YORK

Body Is Discovered in the Hallway of a Tenement House

By International News Service.

New York, April 11.—Slashed to death by a "Jack the Ripper," the nude body of a woman, later identified as Miss Helen Vesey, forty years old, was found lying face downward on the ground floor hallway of the tenement house at No. 17 Catherine street, today.

A crimson trail leading out into the street showed that the body had been dragged into the house from outside.

The woman's clothing, consisting of a cheap gingham dress, a black underskirt and a pair of black shoes, lay piled on the floor a few feet from the body.

The body was found by lodgers, who stumbled over it when they started out to a bakery.

A policeman remembered that two hours before the body had been discovered, a man, apparently in a mental haze, had been arrested while shuffling along East Broadway, a few blocks from where the woman's body was found.

The man's hands and coat sleeves were covered with blood. He gave his name of Michael Marxberetsky, thirty-seven years old. He was taken to the scene of the murder.

Physicians found a deep eight-inch wound on the torso, besides many minor cuts and bruises.

The police believe the murder took place in a room in the vicinity and that the body was carried by the slayer through the deserted streets to the Catherine street building.

Mrs. Thomas Leaves Husband and Son After Buying New Clothing

Search is being made today in Boston and other New England cities for twenty-five-year-old Mrs. Sadie Thomas, who left her husband and six-year-old son on March 30 after drawing out the family savings of $1,500.

Shortly before her disappearance from their home at No. 34 Lynde street, he said, she went to the bank, unknown to him, and drew out the family savings which had been swelled by the recent sale of a boarding house.

DON'T CUT U. S. NAVY TO 67,000, SAYS HUGHES

Washington, April 11.—Reduction of navy personnel to 67,000 enlisted men as provided in the naval appropriation bill now being considered by the House would reduce the American Navy below the 5-5-3 ratio established by the arms conference and "would be most injurious to the interests of the United States," Secretary Hughes today wrote Representative Rogers, Republican, of Massachusetts.

EDISON MAKES NO MOVE TO CUT RATES

Hale Admits on Stand That Boston Pays More for Light Than Most Cities

Although scores of companies in all sections of the country are producing electricity at rates varying from 1¢ to 10¢ per cent. less than the Edison Electric Illuminating Company is charging its 135,000 customers in Greater Boston, Superintendent of Light Richard S. Hale admitted that the Edison has made little or no effort to determine whether such satisfactory conditions could be established here in Boston.

Mr. Hale's admission was made under the cross-examination by Attorney Grenville S. MacFarland in the case brought by the Boston American and the city to force down the rates for benefit of the 135,000 consumers.

"You are one of the officials who are employed to keep the Edison advised concerning the methods and practices of other companies," said Mr. MacFarland. "In fact, you have served on several important committees of the National Electric Light Association. Tell us why it is that the rate in New York city is so much lower than it is here in Boston."

LARGE CITY, LOW RATE.

"New York is a larger city," said Mr. Hale.

"Then, as a general principle, the larger the city and the larger the number of customers, the lower the rate?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"As a general principle, yes," said Mr. Hale.

"Then why does it cost nearly 19 per cent. more to produce electricity in Boston than in Salem?" said Mr. MacFarland. "The conditions may vary," said Mr. Hale.

"Now tell us just what the conditions are that vary and how much those conditions contribute to make up the great difference in price." Mr. Hale said he did not know.

"Why does it cost 18 per cent. more to produce electricity in Boston than in Springfield?" Mr. Hale said he did not know.

"Why does it cost 8 per cent. more in Boston than in Worcester? Certainly, that city is near enough to make a comparison." Mr. Hale said he did not know.

IGNORANT OF CONDITIONS.

Mr. MacFarland asked why the cost of delivering electricity to homes and factories was two and one-half times greater in Boston than in Fall River, three times as great in Boston as in Salem, twice as great in Boston as in Springfield, nearly three times as great in Boston as in Baltimore and nearly two and one-half times as great in Boston as in Holyoke.

Mr. Hale said he was not familiar with conditions in those cities.

"You have access to all the reports?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"Yes," said Mr. Hale.

"Well, doesn't it stimulate your interest to find out what conditions, if any, cause these other cities to be able to sell electricity to their customers at much lower rates than the Edison?" Mr. Hale said he did not think it was worth his time to investigate those conditions.

"But won't those companies tell the Edison what it wants to know?"

"Yes, they tell us what we want to know."

"Well, you have investigated conditions in Cincinnati. Tell us why the cost of producing electricity there is so much lower." Mr. Hale said he did not know.

MEMORANDUM LOST.

"You say you have been to Cleveland six or eight times to investigate conditions, the last time within a year, for since these hearings started, because you expected I would ask the Edison officials something about Cleveland," said Mr. MacFarland.

"Why are the distribution, storage battery and transmission charges six times less in Cleveland than in Boston?"

Mr. Hale said that he brought back a satisfactory report to the Edison officials, but that he read to them from a memorandum he had prepared and he thought the memorandum had been thrown away.

"As a result of this report, which made your officers laugh with satisfaction, are you prepared to say that the difference in price is justified by the conditions?" said Mr. MacFarland.

Mr. Hale said he was not prepared to say that he did not think the comparisons were all important.

"You helped the Edison prepare its case when the Public Franchise League was attacking the Edison's rates, didn't you?" said Mr. MacFarland. "I did," said Mr. Hale.

LOWER IN 700 CITIES.

"You remember that the Edison then spent thousands of dollars investigating conditions in other cities, even sending experts to England and yet they cited those conditions as being of importance because the Edison was then selling at lower rates than the other places?" Mr. Hale said he recalled it.

"The nine is on the other foot now, isn't it?" said Mr. MacFarland.

"There are 700 other cities in the country that are selling electricity at lower rates than the Edison? Many of them are smaller cities than Boston. Most of them are smaller companies. In fact, the Edison is charging out the highest rate in the country?"

"Frankly," said Mr. Hale, "it is only human nature to bring the thing out if it favors you and not to bring it out if it doesn't favor you."

Mr. Hale in answer to other questions said that the Edison rates were built up on experiment. He said the rates were often reduced by the company in the hope of getting new business.

Roxbury Man Goes to Bed in Wrong House; Fined $10

Liquor makes it hard to distinguish one house from another. This fact landed Fred G. Williams of Copeland street, Roxbury in Roxbury court today and cost him $10.

Patrolman Fortin told the court of being summoned to No. 7 Copeland street by a frightened woman, who told of a strange man in the house. Arriving at the place, he said he found Williams had gone to bed in a vacant room.

Williams admitted the charge, saying he had been intoxicated and had entered the wrong house by mistake. Judge Palmer, on learning Williams had never been arrested before, imposed a $10 fine.

WOMAN TWICE GETS DIVORCE IN YEAR

As the result of the second divorce granted to her within a year from the same man, Mrs. Marion L. Nason of Portland, Me., is finally freed from her husband, Philip E. Nason, a well-known Brookline swimmer.

She has been allowed alimony of $75 a month and custody of their two children.

Mrs. Nason was awarded her first divorce last September on the ground of cruelty and non-support. Her husband failed to appear to contest the suit. Later he claimed he had not been notified of the action and the divorce was annulled.

In February Mrs. Nason again brought suit. Nason was notified this time, but again failed to appear. The second decision in the wife's favor was then handed down.

KILLS HIMSELF IN HOME OF A FRIEND

Note in Dorchester Suicide's Pocket Asks Mother to Forgive Drinking

John H. Hebert, twenty-five years old, of No. 12 Talbot avenue, Dorchester, shot and killed himself in the home of his friend, James Romano, of No. 11 Greenwich street, Dorchester, following a drinking bout, according to evidence in the hands of Assistant Medical Examiner William Watters.

A note to Hebert's mother was found in the dead man's pocket. In it he begged forgiveness for drinking.

A revolver found close to his body had been discharged twice, and John Johnson of No. 6 Parker terrace, Dorchester, who was with the man a few moments before his death, said one shot had been fired at Romano's door. The other crashed through Hebert's right temple.

Romano, Hebert and Johnson are employed at the Southampton street roundhouse of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. After leaving work yesterday afternoon they all had some drinks, Romano told the police.

Romano agreed to let the two men sleep in his house, he said.

He went to East Boston on an errand and later to the home of his brother at No. 58 Greenwich street for supper.

While there, Johnson came running in, crying that Hebert had gone crazy and was playing with a gun. The police were summoned and found Hebert dead.

PLAN STRIKE OF WOOLEN MILL EMPLOYES

McMahon Tells of Effort to Organize 12,000 More Lawrence Workers

Lawrence, April 11.—Announcement by President Thomas F. McMahon of the United Textile Workers that steps would immediately be taken to organize the 12,000 workers in the American Woolen Company plants was today's outstanding development in the strike of 20,000 local mill operatives.

McMahon's statement revived rumors of sympathetic strike by woolen workers, who would be organized in the company's four mills—Wood, Prospect, Ayer and Washington.

"We are not asking wool employes to strike," declared President McMahon, "but we believe it would be a good idea to have them properly organized. They are all in sympathy with the present movement."

Mill agents today refused to comment on a report that mills affected by the strike were ready to make a concession to the strikers in the matter of a wage cut.

This report was to the effect that the mills would offer a 10 per cent. proposition to the strikers through a mediation committee.

Woonsocket Mill Is Closed by Walkout

Woonsocket, R. I., April 11.—The Manchester Company's cotton mill here was closed today by a walkout of 160 weavers who refused a proposed 10 per cent. wage cut and fifty-four-hour working week. The management announced new contracts could be made only by revision of wages, effective May 1.

This is the second cotton mill strike in Woonsocket due to proposed cuts, the first, at the Woonsocket Falls Mill, having been settled by compromise.

R. I. Pickets Arrested at Homes of Workers

Pawtucket, R. I., April 11.—Picket lines at the textile plants here were unusually well recruited today as the State militia made preparations to depart. Demonstrations by pickets at the homes of workers forced the police to make several arrests.

Fifty persons who arrived here from Providence today were met by a strikers' delegation. After a conference they returned. Strike leaders said they were intended for duty at the plant of the Jenckes Spinning Company.

RAPS FINANCIERS FOR PENNSYLVANIA'S CUT

Philadelphia, April 11.—"The financial interests have us by the throat," James P. Sohier, Brooklyn attorney, declared today at the annual stockholders' meeting of the Pennsylvania Railroad. "They have refused to finance ordinary business men and it is this that has closed factories along the Pennsylvania and demoralized our business. Our company has had to pay 7½ and 6½ per cent. for money, thereby reducing our dividend."

SCENE AT PIERCE HEARING

DELIVERY MAN TESTIFYING ABOUT FLOWERS

Charles J. Jordan, Natick delivery man, for the Wahan Rose Conservatories, is shown at the left on the witness stand. Justice Pierce is at the right with his hand near his face.

servatories from 1911 to September, 1920," testified Cartwright. "I practically all of the collections. I also knew the market prices of all flowers and fixed the rates for those sold by the conservatories.

"I always took my orders from Ulmer. We had a stall in the wholesale flower district in Winthrop square. I had charge of that, but daily made trips out to the plant. Ulmer came out once a week. Sometimes he came oftener.

"Often on holidays Ulmer ordered a basket of the best roses sent to Judge Pierce's home in Brookline or on Stonehaven Court. He always insisted that the baskets contain at least twenty-five roses—the choicest in the lot. He would usually pick them out himself.

WITH ULMER'S CARD.

"These gifts were made on Easter, Thanksgiving and Christmas. There were times when the roses we sent were selling for a dollar apiece in the wholesale market. Generally we sent them by delivery auto. Once though I carried a basket myself. The roses were too big to fit in the machine.

"Ulmer used to put his card in these baskets. A number of the gifts were made during the big shortage in 1917 and 1918.

"That was the year they ordered the conservatories to cut down and avoid waste. We didn't have flowers enough to supply our regular customers. I told Ulmer that and protested against the fine flat we were keeping.

"But the deliveries were continued.

"In 1919 I went with Jordan (a former delivery man) to Judge Pierce's home and delivered a box of assorted vegetables. We made another similar delivery at a later date. These were sent on Ulmer's orders.

IMMUNITY REFUSED.

"I often saw boxes around the conservatories addressed to the judge, but I don't know who packed them or ordered them sent."

The question of immunity was brought up by Attorney George L. Mayberry, counsel for Pierce, who wanted to know if the witnesses were to be held immune from any criminal actions that might ensue at the hearing.

After a conference Chairman Leonard F. Hardy of the committee ruled that immunity could not be granted and informed all witnesses that they did not have to testify if they did not wish to do so voluntarily. All expressed readiness to take the stand.

The appearance of Attorney-General Allen in the room when the hearing started caused a slight stir. The Attorney-General conferred with counsel for Pierce and then held a private chat with the committeemen.

He retired as suddenly and mysteriously as he had come.

A little later Assistant Attorney-General Abbott arrived and took a seat near the committee. No one would comment on the object of the Attorney-General's visit, nor on the presence of his assistant.

The crowd on hand was the biggest yet, the room being jammed to capacity. Present were many lawyers and a fair sprinkling of women.

John T. Harding, shipper at the Wahan Rose Conservatories, was the first witness of the day. He was quizzed by Attorney George M. Poland, one of the petitioners for Judge Pierce's ousting.

"I was shipper in the conservatories for a number of years up to February, 1921," he testified. "Starting in 1911 I began to receive my orders from Ulmer. I don't remember just the nature of the orders—but they concerned the packing of roses.

ROSES EVERY WEEK.

"At first I only got occasional orders to pack roses for Judge Pierce. The latter part of 1919, though, I began to send them to the judge once every week. As a rule they were shipped in boxes—never less than twelve roses to a box.

"I used to write the name on the boxes myself. I addressed them to 'Hon. E. P. Pierce.' They were taken away by our regular delivery man.

"I kept a written list of all deliveries in the greenhouse, but I don't know where it is now. I stopped packing roses when Mr. Goodale took charge of the conservatories in February, 1921."

Charles J. Jordan, former delivery man at the conservatories, recalled to the stand by Attorney Poland, testified that he once delivered a basket with twenty-five roses to Judge Pierce's Brookline home.

HORSEMANSHIP SCHOOL PLANNED AT NORWICH

Northfield, Vt., April 11.—Plans for a Summer school of horsemanship and polo have been submitted to President Plumley of Norwich University by the military department for consideration by the trustees. It is proposed to enroll twenty-five men the first year.

PELLETIER IS QUOTED AT ULMER TRIAL

Gave Judge Pierce's Opinion on Ousting Lawyer, Woman Swears

"You will have a hard time removing Ulmer from control of the Henry M. Wood Sons Company," Judge Edward P. Pierce told the then District Attorney Joseph C. Pelletier in 1919, according to testimony given by Mrs. Mary S. Hand, former treasurer of the company, today at the trial of Attorney W. Edwin Ulmer, charged with making false returns to the commissioner of corporations.

"He is well entrenched there," Judge Pierce said, according to the witness, "and any attempt to remove him will result in a long drawn-out fight."

Ulmer was secretly indicted with Judge Pierce in connection with the charges now being aired before a legislative committee at the State House. It is alleged Ulmer made gifts to the judge which caused him to obstruct justice.

The case heard in court is in connection with the Henry Wood Sons Company which Ulmer controlled. It is on the charge of making false returns concerning the company's liabilities that he is on trial in the Superior Criminal Court. He is conducting his own case.

It was in Ulmer's cross-examination of Mrs. Hand, who had previously testified that Ulmer's distorted amounts of the company's liabilities to reduce the tax due, that the names of the Supreme Court justice and the former district attorney were brought out.

Mention of them caused a stir in the court room. Pelletier has been mentioned as a witness against Judge Pierce in the State House hearing.

Efforts of Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro to have the evidence of Mrs. Hand stricken out on the grounds of it being confidential with Pelletier failed. Judge Fosdick ruled that it be admitted.

Mrs. Hand, daughter of Edmund Wood, founder of the business, testified to several liability items which she declared Ulmer had falsified. She charged she was removed from the treasurership after she had refused to sign the certificate. When she had pointed out discrepancies to Ulmer she testified he said: "Then I shall stand."

FRESH PAY CUT PROTESTED BY RAIL WORKERS

Walsh Presents Track and Shop Laborers' Case Before Federal Board

Chicago, April 11.—Any further reduction in the wages of railroad maintenance of way employes "would doom to still further degradation families of 500,000 track and shop laborers at present receiving such low wages it is impossible for them to secure proper food and other bare necessities of existence," Frank P. Walsh, counsel for these employes, declared today before the United States Railroad Labor Board.

"The majority of these employes," he continued, "are now receiving an average wage of only $70 per month, and within the past have have suffered a reduction of almost 20 per cent. I contend, and I feel sure that every sane, thinking person will agree with me, that no man can support a family at a level of human decency on $70 a month.

"Experts have demonstrated that twice this amount and more is necessary to maintain a family at even the lowest level that can be conceived of at a minimum permissable to the household of an American citizen."

DIES SUDDENLY ON 40TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Just as he was finishing work in the Readville car shops and preparing to return home to celebrate his fortieth wedding anniversary, William F. Whitty, sixty-two years old of Canton, dropped dead. Heart failure was the cause. A large number of friends had gathered at h's home for the wedding celebration when their joy was turned to sorrow by news of his sudden death.

Laborers' Pay Cut Is Infanticide, Says Walsh

Chicago, April 11.—Reduction of the wages of unskilled laborers on the railroads would be an "act of wholesale infanticide," Frank P. Walsh, noted labor attorney, declared in a plea before the United States Railroad Labor Board today. "These men cannot support their families now on the wages they are receiving," he said. "They average $70 a month."

RIGHT OF WAY IS FAVORED FOR BONUS BILL

Washington, April 11.—Senate Republican leaders have about decided to give the bonus bill limited right of way over the tariff bill.

With the reporting of the tariff measure, the party leaders expect the finance committee to begin work late this week on bonus legislation and to have it ready for the Senate within a fortnight.

The plan is to press the bonus measure quickly to a vote, so as not to delay materially the tariff debate.

There is said to be strong sentiment among Senate Republicans for radical changes in the House bonus bill.

One of the plans under serious consideration is said to provide for conpensary certificates to pay the bonus until interest payments on allied debts are received.

SCHOONER FORD TAKES WATER AT ESSEX

Gloucester Girl Breaks Bottle Over Bows of Possible Cup Challenger

Essex April 11.—The schooner Henry Ford, built to fish out of Gloucester and as a possible challenger for the fisherman's cup now held by the Canadian Bluenose, was launched at the Arthur D. Storey shipyard today.

Two thousand persons saw Miss Arethusa Mortimey, daughter of Captain Clayton Morrissey, of Gloucester, who is one of the schooner's owners and who will be her skipper, break the christening bottle across her bows.

The launching went smoothly and the vessel was taken in tow to the rigger's and fitter's.

The Henry Ford is somewhat smaller than the schooners Puritan and Mayflower, which may be her competitors for the right to challenge the Canadian defender in the next fisherman's race.

She measures 125 feet 8 inches over all, and has a 26-foot beam with a 12-foot depth of hold.

She was designed by Captain Thomas J. McManus of Boston, originator of the knockabout type.

$2,500 FOR MOTHER OF POLICE STRIKE VICTIM

Mrs. Louise McGill, mother of Arthur D. McGill, who was shot and killed during the police riots attending the strike in 1919, has been awarded $2,500 by the City Council, the payment of which will be made in weekly instalments of $15. Mayor Curley had withheld his signature to a previous order for $4,000, stating that he would not sign or consent to the payment of over $2,500 for any deaths resulting from the police strike, in which the city was not responsible.

TRAIN SERVICE ON NEW HAVEN DENOUNCED

Breakdowns Between Boston and Marlboro Force Misses to Walk Five Miles

How Marlboro girls who work in Boston stores have been forced to walk home five miles at night in sleet and snowstorms over dismal highways after service on the New Haven railroad had collapsed was today described at a public hearing of protest held before Chairman Henry C. Attwill of the State Department of Public Utilities.

Miss Celia Sullivan and Miss Catherine Cronin said the engines in use on the New Haven between South Framingham and Marlboro are no better than junk.

They ride from Boston to South Framingham and then transfer to the branch line running to Marlboro, they said, but on numerous occasions the locomotives have broken down and they have been obliged to walk home.

"The service is scandalous," said Edward F. McSweeney. "It is so bad that I often think the New Haven is going about it deliberately. These girls and others leave their homes at 7 a. m. and seldom get back before 8 p. m.

"Trains leave Boston at 5 and 6 p. m., and the passengers occasionally reach Marlboro at midnight. If some high official of the New Haven was using that train, it would get there on time all right."

TRUCKMAN HELD FOR CRUELTY TO ROOSTERS

Carmelo Germano, Bristol, R. I., truck driver, was arraigned in Roxbury Court today, charged with cruelty to fowl. Harvey R. Fuller, agent for M. S. P. C. A., told of roosters nearly suffocated under a load of furniture on the truck Germano was operating.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY

Veterans' Military Ball to Attract Smart Set

By BETTY ALDEN.

A SCENE of unusual brilliance is expected at the grand military ball which will be held a week from tonight in the South Armory by the Associated Veterans' Societies of New England. The affair will be the official "coming out" party of the association, which includes more than a dozen veterans' organizations, and will inaugurate their work for funds with which to build a common home for the several units cooperating.

Not only are many resident society folk planning to attend the ball, but a goodly number of persons prominent in military and diplomatic circles have accepted invitations to be present, which means that many of the male visitors will wear full dress uniforms, and the mingling of the latter with the stunning gowns of the feminine contingent present promises a colorful and interesting scene.

Dr. L. Vernon Briggs of Beacon street, chairman of the ball committee, has returned from a trip to the capital, reporting the enthusiastic endorsement of the affair by Vice-President Coolidge, and the latter's regret that a dinner at the White House on that evening will prevent his being present at the function. But he assured Dr. Briggs that Mrs. Coolidge would be pleased to serve on the patronese list.

Mrs. George Richmond Fearing is in charge of the patroness committee, her able assistants including Mrs. Stephen V. R. Crosby, Mrs. William A. Gaston and Mrs. L. Vernon Briggs. The committee has received the acceptance of the following matrons to lend their distinguished names to the ball: Mesdames Freeman Allen, Oric Bates, Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., Arthur Carey, Allen Curtis, Louis Curtis, Eben S. Draper, Nathaniel Emmons, Elisha Fisher, Eugene Noble Foss, Allan Forbes, J. Malcolm Forbes, Charles E. Gale, Charles P. Greenough, 2d, Robert Homans, Walcott Howe Johnson, Arthur T. Lyman, George H. Lyman, Ronald R. Lyman, Wayland M. Minot, Charles G. Minter, J. Harleston Parker, Endicott Peabody, Dudley L. Pickman, F. Delano Putnam, Morton Prince, Philip S. Sears, William H. Slocum, Rodman Paul Snelling, Albert Thorndike, Nathaniel Thayer, Richard Wheatland, Frederick W. Whitwell, Moses Williams, Jr., and Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott, as well as the Misses Cornelia Bowditch and Dorothy Forbes.

Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs has opened her home at No. 128 Beacon street for an Easter sale to be held today from 10 until 6 o'clock, in aid of the Boston League of Women Voters.

I note that Mrs. Robert Gould Shaw has charge of the knitted articles, Mrs. Alden A. Thorndike of household supplies,? Miss Louvan W. Hyde of the bags and Miss Amelia Baldwin of flowers.

Those in charge announce that Easter flowers bought at the sale will be delivered in the city free of charge next Saturday.

Mrs. Franklin Hobbs devotes no end of her time in the interests of the league, and she has on numerous occasions lent her home for affairs given in aid of the league. I recall that last Fall she was one of the prominent workers for the large French "market" held at the Copley-Plaza, when the ballroom of the hotel was transformed into a French market scene. As Mrs. Hobbs had just returned from extensive travels in France, her advice in the arranging of the "market" was invaluable.

This morning marks the close of a series of concerts held at the Copley-Plaza in aid of the New England Peabody Home for Crippled Children, one of the smart set's most popular philanthropies.

Among the patrons and patronesses for these concerts are Governor and Mrs. Channing H. Cox, Major-General and Mrs. Clarence R. Edwards, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Dr. and Mrs. Robert Lovett, the Rev. and Mrs. William Dewart, and Mesdames Roger Wolcott, Curtis Guild, Edward Wigglesworth, Edward Brandegee, Malcolm Forbes, Robert Gould Shaw, 2nd, Arthur Hunnewell, William Lowell Putnam, Leverett Saltonstall, Alanson Tucker, C. Minot Weld, Geoffrey Whitney, Henry H. Fay, Jr., Arthur W. Blake and W. Scott Fitz.

Miss Rosanna Thorndike of Beacon street is a prominent member of the American Women's Overseas League, one of the dozen organizations co-operating in the large military ball to be held a week from today. Miss Thorndike's mother, Mrs. Albert Thorndike, is one of the patronesses for the affair

'Show Signs of Life,' Says Speaker to Lawmakers

Speaker B. Loring Young today called the House chairmen of all legislative committees into a conference, told them the chances of an early adjournment "are exceedingly discouraging" and urged them to show signs of life.

Although 1,961 bills were filed with the Legislature this year, eighty-nine more than a year ago, Young said there are now 477 bills remaining in committee, as compared with 255 a year ago at this season.

He said the session made a good beginning, so far as speed was concerned, but has steadily slowed up.

BORAH TO SHOW UP ERRORS IN SIBERIA

War and State Department Cliques in Disagreement Over American Policies

By WILLIAM HARD.
Copyright, 1922, by Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, April 11.—Underneath the subpoenas which Senator Borah has sent for certain army officers to come and testify on Siberia before his labor committee in the Senate, there lies a long story of bitter disagreement regarding Siberia, between War Department and State Department cliques.

If Borah persists in his inquiry, he will develop a line of testimony from General Graves, Colonel Morrow, Captain Eart and others, which will make our State Department's Siberian policy (and also its whole present general Russian policy) stand up and fight for its life.

A lot of our army officers who went to Siberia got sick of the job which the State Department wished on them.

The State Department, through its well-known acquaintance with about everybody who ever got chased out of Russia and through its equally well-known lack of acquaintance with anybody actually able to stay in Russia and run it, got the happy idea we ought to go to Siberia and help the noble anti-Bolsheviks.

This sounded fine in drawing rooms in Washington. It was entirely different in Siberia when our army officers got there, and some of them want to say so.

They found that the Bolsheviks might be terrible enough all right, but the noble anti-Bolsheviks had highly disagreeable habits, such as throwing prisoners into the furnaces of locomotives and having them worried to death by dogs.

They found also that the State Department had taken the Japanese into Siberia by special invitation, so to speak, and that the Japanese were "top dog" in Siberia and the Americans the tail. The tail would now like to do a little waving and wigwagging to indicate what it thinks about it all.

The story will be revealed of how our diplomatic and consular representatives welcomed the Japanese into Siberia and "sicked" them on into their Siberian adventure, from which now we earnestly strive to recall them.

The story underneath Senator Borah's inquiry is that we were stung in Siberia and produced and that we are in process of being stung in European Russia and will doubtless protest, and that a lot of people in New York and in Washington, outside the State Department, would now like to know just why it is that in these matters the foreigners seem to get the stuff and we seem to get the grievance.

Moments Which Count

When you are conscious of the scrutiny of interested eyes which appraise every detail of your appearance, can you sit serene, secure in the consciousness that there is nothing to criticise but everything to admire?

Happy is the girl who can answer "yes" in these all important moments. She is the girl who knows that her fresh, clear skin and smooth, white neck and arms are sure to command admiration.

The girl who is not so sure of her personal attractiveness, who is conscious that complexion defects may affect her popularity, should waste no time remedying these conditions. The secret is cosmetic cleanliness, which keeps the skin free from clogging accumulations.

Once a day, do this

Once a day, preferably at bedtime, give your face a thorough cleansing. This doesn't mean a harsh, irritating scrub but a cosmetic cleansing accomplished by the gentlest possible means.

Soap is necessary, but only the mildest soap should be used. This is Palmolive, blended from palm and olive oils.

Once you experience the mild, soothing effect of its smooth, creamy lather you will recognize daily cleansing as the surest complexion beautifier.

Removal, once a day, of the accumulations of dirt, oil, perspiration and the remaining traces of cold cream and powder is absolutely essential to a clear, fresh skin.

Neglect results in clogged pores, coarse texture and blackheads. When the accumulated soil carries infection, pimples are the result.

An ancient secret

The value of beautifying cleansing was discovered long ago, in the days of ancient Egypt. It was Cleopatra's secret—whatever the embellishments she employed, they were applied after the daily bath with palm and olive oils as cleansers.

The great queen was famous for her beauty long after early youth was passed. She kept her looks with the aid of the same gentle, stimulating cleansing which we recommend today.

Blended from the same oils

Palmolive is blended from the same costly oriental oils which served Cleopatra as cleanser and beautifier. We import them from overseas in vast quantity to keep the Palmolive factories at work day and night. This is necessary to supply the world-wide demand.

This popularity has reduced price, as manufacturing volume permits economies which lower production costs. Thus we are able to supply Palmolive for only 10 cents a cake.

So while Palmolive ranks first as finest facial soap, you can afford to follow Cleopatra's example and use it for bathing.

Remember that complexion beauty does not end with the face, and beautify your body with Palmolive.

She threw the phial in the snow and followed them. Last Sunday she conducted her last meeting on the Bowery, told the story of her life and converted several human derelicts.

CHORUS BEAUTY LAYS SIEGE TO HERRICK

Each Day She Will Ask the Oklahoma Congressman to Marry Her

By Cosmopolitan News Service.

Washington, April 11.—Manuel Herrick, Oklahoma's sockless statesman, was preparing today for a state of siege following the threat of a lovely Ziegfeld chorus girl to picket him until he said the word that would fill her young heart with joy.

So beautiful and only eighteen and she loves him so—and Oklahoma's congressman fortifies himself in his citadel at the Capitol, refusing even to look upon her lovely face.

"And what do you think of that?" says Anna Neibel with a sigh. "The poor boob."

Anne, who blooms in the Ziegfield's garden of beauties in the Follies, has threatened to file a $50,000 suit against the sockless statesman for breach of promise.

She would rather have Manuel than $50,000, Anna says. He's priceless, according to Anna.

"I'll take him sockless—he's worth more to me than millions," said Anna with a tear in each of her lovely blue eyes.

And so Anna announced today accompanied by her mamma who will picket Manuel in the House office building during the remainder of the week.

"Every morning I shall ask him to marry me," she said. "I am willing to give up my stage career and everything for him."

Over the telephone a friend of Anna's sent the Congressman word that she was "dying" to see him.

"Let her die," roared the statesman from Perry, Okla. "Tell her to go to h—. I'll pay for the flames that burn her."

Anna bore up bravely under these cruel words.

"The poor boob," she said. "He's so stingy he wouldn't even pay for the match."

Anna declared the Oklahoma statesman looked like a pancake. She said he courted her as if wooing Congress to vote for one of his best bills and bade her to think of the glory of the American flag and the Constitution as he asked her to marry him.

"He was just simply fascinating," said Anna. "He sent me copies of his bills instead of love letters. I didn't know what they meant, but they were grand. He would stand before me with his hand on his right breast and looking up at the ceiling, he would make a speech about the Constitution and ask me to be his. I felt just like Congress and it was all perfectly lovely."

Henderson Confirmed

Washington, April 11.—The Senate today confirmed the nomination of Paul Henderson of Chicago as Second Assistant Postmaster-General.

GO TO JAIL FOR RENT DEBT

MRS. BRIDGET MULLEN AND BABY.

The landlord wanted his money. Mrs. Mullen could not pay. Her husband was sick and out of work. Mrs. Mullen was sent to jail for non-payment of rent. With her went the infant shown above. Later a neighbor paid the back rent and Mrs. Mullen was released to return to her family, which includes several other small children.

STATE SCORED FOR JAILING OF MOTHER

Injustice to Children in Mullen Rent Case, Says Mrs. Humphrey

"It's pretty appalling."

This was the comment made by Mrs. Arthur Allen Humphrey, prominent Framingham Centre clubman and social worker, when she learned that Mrs. Bridget Mullen, a mother of several small children, had been jailed for non-payment of a rent bill.

Mrs. Mullen was taken to jail with her baby, after she had gotten herself into contempt of court in connection with her failure to pay the bill. Her husband was sick and out of work. But the landlord wanted his money.

Later John Woods, a neighbor, paid the rent and Mrs. Mullen was released.

Mrs. Humphrey, who is a close student of situations which arise when heads of families are jailed, suggested that the state might have taken a wiser course than that of imprisoning the mother.

"Why wouldn't it be more sensible for the State to find a job for the husband, instead of sending the wife to jail? It doesn't pay the State to deprive a group of small children of a mother's care.

"They run wild. They can't understand what has happened; they lose their respect for the laws, and the mother isn't home to tell them what to do and what not to do. Then, later, we wonder where our criminals come from."

ASKS STATE FOR $30,000 ON $63.62 NOTE

Descendant of Samuel Mather Demands Interest on Loan Made in 1794

Samuel Mather loaned the State $63.62 on June 10, 1794. He took the note and locked it in the family trunk. His great-great-grand-daughter recently opened the trunk and found the note, unpaid. She today asked the Ways and Means Committee to pay her in excess of $30,000, which represents the face of the note and the compand interest since 1794.

The old-fashioned trunk, studded with brass tacks, was handed down from Samuel Mather to his son, Thomas. It was passed on from Thomas to his daughter, Elinora, to her daughter, Mrs. Gaylord, and to Mrs. Gaylord's daughter, who is the present claimant, Mrs. Elmyra Conner, former resident of Westfield, now of Berkeley, Cal.

In 1794 the State acquired the habit of borrowing money from its people to pay the State expenses. Samuel Mather loaned the $63.62, taking a note at 5 per cent., to expire on July 1, 1794. The note was never presented for payment.

Charles E. Smith, uncle of Mrs. Conner, today said to the committee that there was not disposition on the part of the family to "hold up" the State. He said they considered the note, with its accrued interest totalling $30,000, to be a moral and legal obligation.

State Treasurer James Jackson telephoned to the committee from his sick bed that the claimant should be paid the principal, nothing more. Deputy State Treasurer George H. W. Willard told the committee he believed Mrs. Conner should be paid $119.69, the sum computed to July 1, 1821, when the statutory liability was said by him to have expired.

Jackson said that Mrs. Conner's demand has caused antique collectors to deluge his department with all sorts of claims.

The situation was further complicated when Chairman Lyman of the committee announced that a direct heir of Samuel Mather has sent word in that while he knew nothing about the note he wants to be declared "in" if the State decides to pay the $30,000.

HARDING INDORSES MOTHERS' DAY PLANS

Indianapolis, April 11.—Endorsement of the observance of "Mothers' Day" by the American Legion Auxiliary was given by President Harding today in a letter received by Mrs. Lowell N. Holart, national president of the auxiliary. "Your purpose to honor all mothers," said the President, "and particularly the mothers of the men who wore the uniform, and also to give voice to the desire for the fullest recognition of their claim upon the nation, is wholly worthy and commendable."

STEAMER LANE PUT 60 MILES TO SOUTH

Hydrographic Office Gives Out New Routes to Avoid Iceberg Catastrophes

By Associated Press.

Washington, April 11.—Steamship traffic in the North Atlantic will be moved sixty miles south of the present double steamship lane through the ice danger zone of the Grand Banks under advisory instructions sent out by the Hydrographic office.

The eastbound traffic to Europe made the change last Saturday. The westbound lane will move April 15.

Action of the Hydrographic office was based upon the desire of the steamship companies associated in the Trans-Atlantic track agreement, organized in London, which decided last Saturday that the shift would be desirable at this time, although there has been as yet no menace of icebergs in the steamship lanes.

The season when the bergs break loose and sometimes force their way into the ordinary lanes of steamship travel is near at hand, however, and the Hydrographic office welcomed the decision of the London Association of Steamship Companies and promptly communicated with all the remainder of the 21 lines operating over the North Atlantic routes.

400 HOMELESS IN ILLINOIS FLOOD

Beardstown, Ill., April 11.—Weakened by pressure of the highest waters in the Illinois River's history, the levee here broke today and twenty-six city blocks were inundated. Approximately 400 were made homeless.

Detroit, April 11.—Northern Michigan counties were faced today by the worst flood in years as rivers and creeks, swelled by the fast melting snow and heavy rains, overran their banks, inundated thousands of acres of property and swept away trees, fences and buildings.

One man is dead and a score have had narrow escapes from being carried off in the whirling floods, which are still rising.

Guy Stanton of Onaway was killed while fighting back the dam burst at Tower, Mich., which did $60,000 damage.

14 PLANTS HIT AS 1,000 MORE MINERS QUIT

Frick Coke Company and Six Independents Affected by New Walkout

Pittsburgh, April 11.—Influence of union organizers, is being more strongly felt in the coke regions of Pennsylvania where non-union labor is employed.

Approximately 1,000 miners in the Connellsville region quit their work, affecting eight of the H. C. Frick coke companies' plants and six independent plants.

Headquarters of the United Mine Workers announced determination to send additional organizers into the territory.

125,000 Non-Union Miners Now on Strike

Indianapolis, Ind., April 11.—Approximately 50,000 non-union miners of the bituminous field joined in the nation-wide strike, John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, said here. About half of the 150,000 men in the anthracite mines are not members of the union, but officials of the union claim most of these now participating in the strike. This would make a total of 125,000 non-union miners out.

While no exact estimate was made of the men participating in the suspension, it was evident from Mr. Lewis' statement that union officials regard their former estimate of 100,000 as having been exceeded. It was said authoritatively that the union leaders believe that not less than 440,000 men are participating in the walk-out.

SOUTH END GIRL JILTS FIANCE AND ELOPES

Irate Father Asks Police to Aid in Finding Young Couple to Halt Marriage

Rose Hakim, the pretty fifteen-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Najeeb Hakim of No. 32 Hudson street, South End, was engaged to marry Samuel Shogory, twenty-six years old, of Pittsfield. According to her father she annexed her parents and surprised her friends by eloping with John Mansuer, twenty years old, who lived with his mother, Mrs. Sadie Masood, on the top floor of the Hudson street house.

ROSE HAKIM

The girl's father asked the police of Boston and other New England cities to find the young couple and stop the marriage.

The first inkling that a friendship had sprung up between the engaged girl and Mansuer came when Olga Lahiani, nine years old, of No. 32 Hudson street, carried love notes from Mansuer to Miss Hakim. When she left home Miss Hakim was dressed in her best clothes and wore $2,500 worth of jewels, which are her property. She had been engaged to Shogory, according to her father for a month.

TIMELY BEAUTY HINTS

Society women wash their own hair, not because it is a fad, but because they wish to obtain the greatest possible hair beauty and be sure they are not using anything harmful. They have found that in washing the hair it is never wise to use a make-shift, but is always advisable to use a preparation made for shampooing only. Many of our friends say they get the best results from a simple home-made canthox mixture. You can use this at a cost of about a cent a shampoo by getting some canthox from your druggist and dissolving a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes enough shampoo liquid to apply to all the hair instead of just the top of the head, as with most preparations. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear in the rinsing water. Your hair will be so fluffy that it will look much heavier than it is, its luster and softness will also delight you.

'ECTOPLASM' IS NEW SPIRIT VAPOR

Etherealized Matter Exuded from Bodies of Mediums, Says Conan Doyle

"Ectoplasm" is the latest discovery of scientific delvers into the mysteries of spirit land.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of Sherlock Holmes and student of spiritualism, who has just come from England to lecture on spiritual manifestations, is authority for this statement.

The famous novelist is going to lecture to the people of Boston and other American cities, in the course of a tour that will take him over the entire country.

Ectoplasm is a strange putty-like substance which Sir Arthur says is exuded from the bodies of spirit mediums

"It is kind of etherealized matter, and its more tenuous form resembles a nebulous vapor or gas," he said.

"Spirits passing through this vapor become visible to the medium and the matter itself becomes gelatinous in character. It is composed of phosphates, carbonates and sulphates that go to the make up of the human body, as well as other elements we have not yet been able to analyze. The medium loses weight in proportion to the amount of ectoplasm exuded.

Ectoplasm has been photographed," he said.

Sir Arthur was very anxious to make it plain that spiritualism as he understands it is in no way opposed to religion. On the other hand, he declared, "it vitalizes religion by giving us an accurate knowledge of what the next world is like."

He declares that the people of the spirit world hate to see suicides come to them.

"We can't hasten Providence," he explained, "and the person who kills himself here to escape something finds that same thing waiting him across the border."

"There will be marriages in heaven, but not in the gross sense we mortals use the term."

Angels, he says, are but human beings spiritualized to the highest state, and the devil a human being sunk in gross materialism to the lowest stage.

He told of getting a letter from his dead mother, and of having seen her face, even her gray hair and the wrinkles, at another seance.

Certain subjects are not fit matters for communication between inhabitants of this and the people of paradise of Summer land, as he calls the beyond.

He declares that life in the spirit world is "expressed in colors and sounds not perceptive to our eyes and ears."

TWO MEN ARE KILLED BY GAS

Roxbury and Dorchester Residents Lose Lives Accidentally After Retiring

Two Boston men met death accidentally today, both by gas.

They were Patrick Norton, a forty-eight-year-old widower, of No. 2537 Washington street, Roxbury, and Allan L. Fisher, sixty-nine years old, of No. 6 Northam park, Dorchester.

Norton was found dead in a bedroom in the home of his sister at No. 99 Longwood avenue, Brookline.

Gas jets in the room were wide open.

His sister, Mrs. Bridget Downey, made the discovery after awaking to find the house filled with gas. She traced it to a bedroom occupied by her brother.

Fisher was found dead in bed at his home by William Murphy of No. 42 Dickens street.

SHIP BEARING PRINCE NEARS YOKOHAMA

Thousands to Greet British Heir-Apparent on Arrival in Japan

Tokio, April 11 (By the Associated Press).—The Prince of Wales today was nearing Yokohoma where he will disembark for his official visit to Japan, said a wireless message from the battleship Renown, bearing the British heir-apparent from India.

Thousands of Japanese and foreign visitors, among whom were many Americans, planned to go to Yokohama to join in welcoming the Prince, who will be escorted to Tokio through an avenue of Spring blossoms, which are now at their best. Large forces of police have been ordered to maintain strictest guard along the route. The same precautions have been taken throughout Japan.

Premier Takahashi, in his official message of welcome, said the royal visitor's coming to Japan would "go down in history as an epoch heralding the growing harmony and accord between the East and the West."

While the Prince is naturally the central figure of the plans to celebrate his visit, no effort is being spared to provide generous entertainment for the officers and men of the Renown.

Bill Reported in Senate May Increase Cost of Living $2,000,000,000

By International News Service.

Washington, April 11.—After many months of delay the so-called permanent tariff bill, radically different in many important respects from the form in which it was passed by the House last year and revolutionary in some of its administrative and other vital provisions, was finally reported favorably to the Senate today by the Republican majority of the Senate Finance Committee.

The President would be vested by the bill with discretionary power to change and fix rates on imported articles and to even bar foreign products whenever he deemed trade conditions warranted.

Another departure is the establishment of high protective duties on agricultural products which have heretofore been invariably placed on the free list in both Republican and Democratic tariff measures.

While in farming and livestock interests in the West and southwest are expected to derive rich benefits from the bill, the manufacturing interests, particularly of the east, find themselves in the unprecedented position of being deprived of their customary share of compensatory duties because of the impracticability of the bill's authors contend, of their being given rates on manufactured goods proportionate to those imposed upon raw materials upon which they have heretofore had to pay no duty.

It is believed, however, that despite the pronounced objections which the manufacturing and importing interests may regard the new tariff system proposed. That the "agricultural tariff bloc" an off-shoot of the original "agricultural bloc" will force the passage of the bill in much the same form in which it left the committee.

The "ultimate consumer" is the one who is certain to feel the real "pinch" of the measure. It is estimated that while the bill will raise approximately between $200,000,000 and $500,000,000 in revenue, it will boost the already high cost of living $2,000,000,000 or $3,000,000,000 if not more.

Nearly every necessity of life has imposed upon it by the bill a tariff which is expected to materially increase the domestics article while providing it with "protection" from its foreign equivalent.

The dye tariff in the bill is practically an embargo for a year. The basis will rate is fixed at thirty-three cents a pound on "chem contents" or eight cents higher than in the house bill and a level even more advantageous to the wool grower than the famous schedule K of the Payne-Aldrich bill.

Long staple cotton is another "infant industry" of the war which is "protected" by the bill. The industry is given seven cents a pound, but its spokesmen asked for fifteen cents and are prepared to carry their fight to the Senate floor.

JULIA WARD HOWE'S DAUGHTER IS DEAD

New York, April 11.—Mrs. Florence Marion Howe Hall, seventy-seven years old, eldest surviving daughter of the late Samuel Gridley Howe and Julia Ward Howe, is dead at her home in High Bridge, N. J. From her father, who founded the Perkins Institute for the Blind at Boston, she inherited a zeal for philanthropic work and from her mother her marked literary talent. In November, 1871, she was married in Boston to David Prescott Hall, New York lawyer. She was president of the New Jersey Suffrage Association.

Woman, 66, Who Took Poison "Wanted a Little Sleep"

"Don't know what I took, doctor, but I took something. You see, I wanted to sleep, that's why."

Nellie McAneny, 66 years old, looked up in the face of a doctor at the Haymarket Relief Hospital early today.

She had been found unconscious at her home at No. 11 Grants court, Charlestown, and sent to the hospital. A quantity of poison was pumped out of her stomach and then doctors said she would get well.

"I wasn't trying to die," she said. "Just wanted a little sleep." Then she smiled and fell into a doze.

CORK VOTES FACTORY SITE TO HENRY FORD

Cork, April 11, (By the Associated Press.)—The city corporation today decided by a vote of 18 to 13, to grant Henry Ford the site of his tractor factory here in fee simple. When the corporation recently issued a threat of eviction, Ford sent a cable to the effect that, unless he was granted the lands in fee simple, he would move the factory elsewhere.

ICE-BOUND PASSENGERS TAKE PART IN SEAL HUNT

Halifax, N. S., April 11.—While the Red Cross liner Rosalind, which arrived here, was jammed in the ice not far from St. John's, N. F., passengers and members of the crew went overside and gave chase to a herd of seals. They clubbed a number of the animals to death, loaning the bodies to a party of seal hunters who were after another herd not far away.

Dives in Blazing Pyrotechnics to Drag Out His Burning Comrades

San Antonio, Tex., April 11.—John A. Benner of Baltimore, buck private, died today, the hero of the explosion of pyrotechnics on the Camp Bullis rifle range.

Into a crater of fire he plunged again and again, dragging out his burned comrades and collapsing only when there were no more alive in the fiery pit.

The explosion has cost two lives. Nine soldiers were dying today and two others were seriously burned. There were forty-three men in the rifle pit when a rocket backfired and set fire to a huge "dump" of pyrotechnics being used in a night firing problem by troops of Seventeenth Infantry.

One of the injured men is Antonio Durante of New Bedford

PROTECTION OF RADIO FANS PROMISED

Legislation to Keep Broadcasts Free From Outside Matter Is Under Way

Listeners to radiophone broadcasting are going to be protected from attempts to sell the air with unwelcome advertisements and demonstrations, if legislation to be introduced in Congress by Representative Volstead of Minnesota, author of the prohibition law, is successful.

Mr. Volstead's bill, which has been referred to the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, provides that no person, firm or corporation shall broadcast any matter for the purpose of boosting the sale of any article or service, or for the purpose of soliciting funds for any purpose whatsoever.

Violation of the act is punishable by a fine of not more than $1000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

ADVERTISING CURBED.

Expressions of opinion from members of the House and Senate on pending legislation may be broadcasted, but no speech or other matter of this character may be broadcasted unless the same has been printed and delivered at least 24 hours before.

CAPITOL STATION URGED.

Whether in line with the recent one cannot say, but the committee recently held a meeting in the office of Secretary Hoover for the purpose of considering the establishment of a broadcasting station in the Capitol. Judge Wait, who is a member of the committee, is in favor of such a station.

Congressmen intend to read to their constituents what they have been saying on the floor of Congress, but broadcasting privileges for the benefit of the public are not provided for in the bill.

The bill also provides that no person, firm or corporation shall broadcast any matter which is not first submitted to the Secretary of Commerce and approved by him. Violation of the act is punishable by a fine of not more than $1000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.

Although the radiophone has been in use for a number of years, it has only been within the last few months that it has become popular. Many of the leading stores in Boston have installed broadcasting stations, which are used for the purpose of entertaining customers.

A radio lecture and demonstration will be given at Faneuil Hall Monday evening, April 17, by Hiram Percy Maxim, president of the Radio Corporation of America. Mr. Maxim will speak on "Radio Telephony" and will demonstrate the latest developments in the art. He will be assisted by Capt. Peter Gerity, Boston Police Department radio expert.

Great Refund Offer

To Boston People Who Are Weak, Sickly, Nervous or Run-Down

IMPORTANT NOTICE—By special arrangement with the Dae Health Laboratories any person in Boston who wants more strength, energy and endurance, now has the opportunity of using Nuxated Iron so that if you do not get at least 100% greater benefit than you expect it will cost you nothing. Because your money will be promptly returned.

You may wonder how such a liberal offer is possible. The answer is that week after week druggists all over the country report that Nuxated Iron, throughout the country over four million people use it regularly, hundreds of physicians all over the country show that an enormous number of people do not have enough iron in their blood. Without iron the blood becomes thin, pale and watery. In many cases this terribly weakens the vital organs that people often believe they have heart or stomach trouble, kidney diseases, nerve force exhaustion or some other serious ailment. They have pain and palpitation of the heart, sudden dizziness, faintness or spots before the eyes, when as a matter of fact the trouble is many times due to lack of iron in the blood and when iron is supplied, many of these symptoms disappear.

Nuxated Iron contains true organic iron like the iron in your blood. So many people are defeated by iron who would surely be benefited by this remarkable remedy that we recommend that you come right to Liggett's and get a regular $1.10 bottle for 79 cents, use it for two weeks and note the improvement in your own case. You are the judge—if you do not get all and even greater benefits than you expect, just bring back the wrapper and the full amount you paid will be promptly refunded

Joe Lynch, former bantamweight king, will conquer Terry Martin of Providence after ten furious rounds of battling at the Arena's show tonight. That's the conclusion we reached after giving the well-known dope the double X-ray.

Lynch's dazzling speed and ability to send a radio punch from any angle will enable him to breeze through to victory.

But it will be a hard, gruelling fight. Martin, former New England bantamweight champion, will be in there every second fighting like a rage full of wildcats. He'll swap punches with his opponent whenever possible. And he'll force the issue most of the time regardless of how hard and often he may be punched by the Eddie Mead entry.

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

—By B. C. Forbes—

Are our rich financial and business men becoming anxious to win the good-will of the public?

Is the mere possession of enormous riches ceasing to be regarded as worth while?

Will most of us live to see the day when it will become more common for multi-millionaires to use the bulk of their fortunes for beneficient purposes during their own lifetime and not wait until they die before ordering its distribution?

The newspapers have just announced that a man who started in the hardware business and later turned to railroad operations and who has amassed an enormous fortune, is ready to turn over to the public one of the most notable collections of rare books and art treasures ever assembled by a human being. The books, etc., assiduously collected by Henry E. Huntington during the period of many years, embraces many unique specimens valuable beyond computation. They have been gathered not only at great cost, but at great pains and with great care, from many lands. The whole collection, together with the owner's estate, San Marino, near Pasadena, Cal., is about to be presented to the public, accompanied by an endowment fund sufficient to maintain this library and art gallery for generations to come.

* * *

It is not so long since another American business man who accumulated both a huge fortune and a wonderful art collection, announced that the whole collection, together with a magnificent palace housing them in Fifth avenue, New York, would go to the public, along with funds to keep them up, on the passing of the wife (now the widow) of their owner. The man was Henry C. Frick, who died in 1919. This resolution on the part of Mr. Frick was not a deathbed notion, for h confided to me his plans long before he died.

The unprecedented philanthropies of Carnegie and Rockefeller are too well known to call for comment.

But there are quite a few other millionaires who at this moment are devoting millions and millions of dollars for unselfish purposes.

Take George Eastman, for example. For many years at Washington Mr. Smith's was coming to the rescue of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology by furnishing it with a million dollars or more every now and again whenever such assistance became necessary to enable the institution to keep up with the growing demand on the part of young men for its educational facilities. It was not until a year or so ago that the world came out. George Eastman of Eastman-Kodak fame, was the silent benefactor. His gifts to the institution alone have exceeded $10,000,000. The city of Rochester, where his excellently appointed plants are located, has been favored with no less Eastman gifts and of something beyond the gifts, namely, a great deal of thoughtfulness on the part of Mr. Eastman.

The late J. P. Morgan had at the back of his head all along the desire that the priceless art objects, etc., which he collected, should be made accessible to the public for their enjoyment and education.

Henry Ford has recently given Detroit what is perhaps the best-equipped hospital in the world. The institution was originally launched as a municipal affair, but troubles unnumbered were encountered in carrying it through. Ford had contributed liberally, but finally rebelled at the insufficient, extravagant, slip-shod way things were being done. Ultimately he undertook to carry out the whole scheme on the most scientific lines, provided he was given an entirely free hand to run it, and provided, also, arrangements were made for taking care of sick Ford employes.

According to Mr. Ford's own statements, his motive in the end is to take over the whole Muscle Shoals project is purely publicspirited. He wants to provide employment for many thousands in the South and to furnish cheap fertilizer for American farms.

Frank A. Vanderlip, although not abnormally as wealthy as wealth is now measured, has given a lot of both his time and his money in recent years in doing things for the benefit of the public. Julius Rosenwald of Chicago is another example of a business man who has used many of his millions for the furtherance of worthy purposes. So, on a smaller scale, has John H. Patterson, of Dayton, O.

I am told that Herbert Hoover has dipped deeply and is still dipping deeply into his own pocket to enable him to achieve some of the things he has achieved and is still striving to achieve.

The McCormicks of Chicago have been notable contributors. Both the late Phil Armour and the present J. Ogden Armour have given millions for the support of the Armour Institute. Mayor Couzens of Detroit has used his own money without stint for the good of the city, and is also using his own time and strength to accomplish things for the benefit of his fellow citizens. Helen Gould has set a notable example to other rich women in the fruitful utilization of her life and her money.

* * *

Many columns, in short, could be filled with facts, all indicating that the trend is distinctly toward the unselfish use of wealth of business men during their lifetime.

Stocks Close Strong and Active in New York; Money 4%; Marks Higher

COPPERS ARE UP LATE IN THE SESSION

Oils and Motors Finish Higher; Steels Irregular and Rails Are Heavy

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

At the close in New York the list ruled strong, but gains were pronounced by none. Oils and motors were up, coppers were showing small gains, rails were heavy as a class and steels were irregular. Trading ended with a rally. It was very active, total transactions approximating Monday's figure. The drop in the call rate was marked by more business.

U. S. Steel closed at 88¾ up ¼. Mexican Petroleum ended at 123 for a gain of 1¼. Studebaker finished at 120¾, up 2⅞. Chandler had advanced ⅞ to 53 ½. Utah was up 1 at 66½.

Prices were up at the opening, with steels leading in activity for awhile as the result of the latest U. S. Steel tonnage report. But the general advance was met by profit taking and many stocks lost part of all their gains. The price movement was irregular most of the morning, but at noon prices were in a majority. The midday trend was upward and a higher level was maintained early in the afternoon. In the last hour sales for profit again acted as a check. Coppers were strong late in the session, under the leadership of Inspiration, Utah and Anaconda.

The three issues watched most closely by traders were Mexican Petroleum, Studebaker and U. S. Steel. The two first named sold at year highs. There were many other issues on this list. U.I.T. S. Steel was not far below par most of the time. Gains up to the close ranged from fractions to more than fourteen points. Eastman Kodak climbed the furthest, selling up to 140, while especially strong issues included May Department Stores, Stromberg, Studebaker, Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Continental Can, Pacific Oil, Iron Products, Texas Gulf Sulphur, GeNeral Asphalt, Electric Storage Battery and Computing Tabulating. They were up from one to two to five points at their best. Record highs were established by Computing Tabulating and Pacific Oil.

Call money opened at 4½ per cent, and by afternoon was down to 4 per cent. Continental exchange rates were irregular: marks being up. Sterling was lower.

Stocks Irregular During Morning

By W. S. COUSINS.

Copyright, 1922, Cosmopolitan News Service.

New York, April 11.—Stocks moved irregularly during the early part of today's session, while there were no heavy losses recorded, it was only in exceptional cases that gains were made. Rails were able to score advances over the previous closing prices. The early irregularity was marked by the reappearance of profit taking in the rails, industrials and specialties, as a result of which prices eased off for a point or more in the issues under pressure.

Studebaker gave another exhibition of strength in the early trading when it advanced without opposition to 120½, a gain of over 2 points to a new high. Electric Storage Battery at 172½, Marine preferred at 73¾ and Columbia Gas at 85 were also outstanding among specialties. Oils, motors and the industrials and railroad shares that have advanced in brisk fashion since early part of the year, were compelled to bear the brunt of the realizing sales.

Some of the specialties which have not been conspicuous in the market of late were featured today, from profits of 1½ points at 25¾, General Cigar sold up from 72 to 74½ and United Railway investment was strong at 18½.

PACKERS RUSH ABROAD AFTER BUSINESS

Meat Magnates Trying to Recover After Severe Drubbing, Says Evans

By C. B. EVANS.

Chicago, April 11.—Europe keeps tickling, annoyingly, the flanks of the United States with one device and another, but, absorbed as we are in our own affairs, we are less affected by this diversion than formerly.

We can hand out occasionally a loan to some busted government and not feel it particularly, and we can listen to the siren song of a conference since that wishes help from the source of all financial help in these days without neglecting our own business seriously. Hence the reports lately of German credit crises as no irritation and we may even be gratified that the deliberations there have raised the value of sterling exchange above 4.42.

DROP IN MEAT STOCK.

This city does, however, take an interest in one of our great avenues to the stomach of Europe, and the index of the weakness in certain stocks of the packing companies. The Swift International, 50 and once over 55, has dropped to 17 from a recent quotation well above 20. This company is presumed to have a great national opportunity and to have availed itself so far as possible of that opportunity. If it is something of a mystery to the ordinary trader,

It is substantially a holding company for large interests in South America and it is said to have kept constantly on hand a supply of cash sufficiently large to meet the next dividend, but there is much doubt about it at the moment, even talk of cessation of dividends (now 16 per cent) and reorganization. The probabilities are that a dividend will still be paid, likely reduced, and that the company will go on to better things later.

PACKERS GOT DRUBBING.

But certain leading men among the packing companies have recently visited South America and taken a whirl at London, while one of them has made a trip South. That means things on to Berlin and other centers in Europe. What they have brought back in their memory baskets has not been disclosed.

The three heads of the packing companies of Chicago about an hour a drubbing as has been received by any close group of men. It is understood that December, January and February were the worst months. March a poor one. It would seem that the export trade is still decidedly flat, as shown by show from the small number of bills coming on the market.

Factories now employ that about 42,000 persons are unemployed in Connecticut, or about 20 per cent. less than shown by a survey some weeks since.

"BEAUTY'S WORTH," the Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies, which is being shown at Loew's Orpheum this week, is a story of hotel intrigue pointing the Dukey-ish moral, "All that glitters is not gold."

"Beauty's Worth" will, moreover, prove a distinct shock to Quakers and will cause the older ones to keep a sharp watch on their flappers and their flappers' brothers. The story, by Sophie Kerr, is an unusual one and has been capitally directed by Robert G. Vignola.

WINS ARTIST'S LOVE.

Prudence Cole is a Whitney of Pottstown, Pa. She is given an opportunity to visit the mother of Henry Garrison at Haven-by-the-Sea and there finds that Quakers are not appreciated by what the hero rather pompously calls "society snobs and snobbery," but even when they are Whitneys of Pottstown, Pa.

Prudence catches the attention of Cheyne Rovein, the millionaire artist of the Summer colony. He speaks of her as "a real diamond among rhinestones," saying that she only needs a platinum setting. Through a set of charades he is able to see that she gets the setting and then he designs costumes for her that cause Haven-by-the-Sea to sit up gasping. How he by means of the clothes, the attention and proposal of Henry Garrison and then discovers that she doesn't want either. It is, of course, the artist hero whom she wants—and gets.

SCENES BY URBAN.

It is not unusual to find the man who helps a girl win another man falling a few weeks later himself. All the more credit to Miss Kerr for having "put the story over." She has given an old situation new clothes and makes a picture that is entertaining. There is a charade scene, for which the famous Dooley boys appear, that is truly beautiful. It is one of the artistic hand and eye of Joseph Urban. These interpolations in a story are becoming a trade mark of the Marion Davies pictures. They are excellent.

Miss Davies has the courage to appear in nearly four reels in the uncompromising clothes of a Quaker girl instead of her usual smart costumes. There are comparatively few stars who will do that. She manages to look attractive, even in a sunbonnet. It is, however, in the later scenes that she is at her best, for the situations grow more amusing as the film goes on.

June Elvidge does a particularly pleasing bit of work as the "woman with a Summer resort man who is looking for a gold-lined husband." Not only is she a good-looking, but she has poise.

Story by Clara Beranger. Scenario by Lorna Moon. Directed by Sam Wood.

IN "Her Husband's Trademark," at Loew's State Theatre, Gloria Swanson lives up to her reputation as "the most strikingly dressed woman on the screen." She changes from costume to costume as the reels unwind and has, besides, an uncommonly good story to display them.

She is "her husband's trademark." Her beauty and her gorgeous style are the trademark that he has cornered all the markets there are. As a matter of fact, Jim Berkeley is little more than an adventurer, although she does not know this. He plays the part of Allan Franklin, an oil king, for Lois Berkeley's wife, in order to get possession of some of the oil lands. He is frustrated at the last moment by Lois discovery of the plot and her love for Franklin.

The story moves from New York to Mexico, carrying action with it to the last foot, when Franklin and Lois swim the Rio Grande in evening clothes pursued by a band of Mexican bandits, while United States troops are galloping to their rescue.

ROBERTS COMPANY OF BOSTON NOT BANKRUPT

Some of the Boston papers, in their issue of Sunday, April 9, stated that an involuntary petition in bankruptcy had been filed against the Fred H. Roberts Company of No. 124 Essex street, Boston.

This statement is misleading as the company against which the petition was filed is the Fred H. Roberts Company of Cleveland, O. That company was organized under the laws of Massachusetts but its plant is in Cleveland and its entire business has been conducted from that city. It is an entirely different corporation from the F. H. Roberts Company of Boston and the latter company is in no way affected by the bankruptcy of the Cleveland company. The F. H. Roberts Company of Boston is now in a particularly strong financial condition, having current assets of more than $1,200,000 and no current liabilities except for running accounts for purchases amounting to about $50,000.

OLD NOMINATION PLAN OPPOSED BY FULLER

Lieutenant Governor Alvan T. Fuller addressed the Men's Club of the First Congregational Church, Braintree, and said that he deplored the attempt on the part of some of the political leaders in Massachusetts to return to the convention system of nominations.

As the Famous Titles Test advances the Test Editor receives calls, requests and even demands for "another Membership Competition." The other Competition with reference to that form of entertainment remains unchanged. Should there be another Title Test in Fall it undoubtedly will be preceded by a Membership Competition.

Contestants again are advised not to look for trouble in the Test Drawings which is put in each day's Test Drawing is to be sure, more or less, concealed pictures in that, while the artist has a story to tell with each one, his intention must not be to conceal pictures. There are, however, no concealed pictures, no slogans hidden within other pictures. You are not asked to "Find them"—after the fashion of the always popular hidden picture.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

Dear Test Editor:

In Drawing No. 28 the figure appears in the middle of a ghastly-like figure some dark shading resembling a woman with bowed head. Is that what is supposed to be represented or is it just shading, with no particular meaning?

A. M. P.

There are NO concealed pictures, Test Editor.

Please tell me if Drawing No. 24 is water. It looks like it, but it is hard to decide.

C. E. F.

And yet it would be improper for me to decide for you. I am sorry.

Mr. Test Editor:

I sent your letter and I see it went to Rockland, Me., instead of to Rockland, Mass. And about the title of the Correct Titles to the Books: I don't understand why I did not get credit for the prizes you offered. I had 47. Correct Titles of the Books; I suppose you would consider it the prize to Boston and Cambridge than around here I thought everything was drawing off all right but I do not think so by the looks of that.

JAMES M.

Rockland.

LOWEST WAS 31.

No one who sent in 47 Correct Titles won the award. No one who sent in 46 Correct Titles received an award. No one who sent in 45 Correct Titles received an award. The lowest prize-winning total was 32 Correct Titles. The Book Test was 31.

If Title Test prizes appear to be unfair, be sure that the geographical representation would be impossible itself. Marines, Boston, Cambridge, Western Massachusetts, Eastern Connecticut, Maine and Rockland appear in the lists regularly and among the principal winners. I am sending your letter to Rockland, Me., and to Rockland, Mass.

W. J. B.—Any stationery shop can supply you with Drawing No. 36 has not done so in this Test up to date.

Lillian Dennison—Please send address.

W. P. Taunton—The method you suggest is unobjectionable.

GREENBURG 44 YEARS WITH LEOPOLD MORSE CO.

Isaac Greenberg, retail clothing salesman for the Leopold Morse Company, Huron avenue, Boston, has just rounded his forty-fourth year of service for that company.

Greenburg entered the employ of the Leopold Morse Company on April 10, 1878, as errand boy in the show dresser in the original store at Washington and Beattie streets, then occupied by the Corset Company.

The store then consisted of a men's and boy's clothing shop of small dimensions, but steadily grew and expanded until the boy Isaac Greenburg is still one of the most active salesmen. He is in the best of health and has been for 44 years a loyal record to one house, a record of which few can boast.

The Direct Primaries

People of Maine Should Turn Deaf Ears to Politicians' Appeal for a Return to Nomination by Convention

So the Republican politicians of Maine do not like the direct primaries for nominations and do not like popular government. The direct primaries have almost accomplished what the people who passed the direct primary law hoped would be accomplished, and what the politicians dared not oppose when the people, disgusted with the orgies of political conventions, demanded their abolition.

Direct primaries have not been a perfect success. They have not always enabled the best, though the poorest, man to receive the party nomination; they have not always made money inefficient in the control of party nominations.

But virtue is a relative thing in this world, and we do not have to show that direct primaries are ideal or perfect in their operation or that they achieve all that we should like to have in the method of selecting our party candidates. It is enough if the direct primaries are shown to bring us nearer to our ideal than the old-fashioned, corrupted, boss-controlled conventions.

Of course, the Republican politicians will have the sympathy of the Democratic politicians. Politicians do not differ much, whatever their party. They are generally professionals and have the professional point of view. The difference in their attitude toward public questions is generally the result of a difference in history, and circumstances affecting, not themselves, but the rank and file of their respective parties. So we may expect the Democratic politicians to connive with the Republican politicians against this great progressive reform.

Fortunately, the forward movement which preceded the wretched reaction after the war has made it necessary for the politicians to obtain the consent of the people of Maine to abolishing the direct primary.

Maine was once a good Roosevelt State. Unfortunately, the worship of Roosevelt was of his personality in 1912 rather than of his principles. That enabled men to take the leadership of the Roosevelt movement who no more believed in Roosevelt principles than Mark Hanna believed in them, or Senator Crane or Senator Penrose or Barnes of New York or any of the old guard who fought him so bitterly. But we believe, however, that a majority of the rank and file of the Republican party admired Roosevelt for his principles more than they admired his personality, for they have intelligence enough to know that it is principle and not personality that we must enact into our laws.

Therefore, we believe that the appeal of the politicians in Maine to return to the old log-rolling, drunken conventions where "the nights before" are disgraced by the stealthy movements of the corporation lobbyists and the distribution of money, the corrupting of the honor of the delegates and of their morals, too, where it is necessary to break down their resistance to evil suggestions, will be received with deaf ears by the people of Maine.

Would You Like Farming?

Raising Calves, for Instance!

Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Senator Capper's Weekly tells of a farmer who sold a calf to the butcher, telling the butcher to save one hindquarter for the farmer.

The butcher carried out the program, gave the farmer his hindquarter, charged at retail prices. He also gave him seven cents, which was the pay for the other three quarters of the calf, after taking out the price of the hindquarter. That's one picture of farming and of cost of distribution.

In the same issue Capper's Weekly tells of James Burke, a farmer, offering his first-class 428-acre farm to any State or county official that would pay the taxes instead of rent. Capper's Weekly wants to know how the ordinary corporation would feel if it were trying to rent its entire plant for taxes, about 1 per cent. of its value.

Near East Relief Sadly in Need of Funds

The Near East Relief, functioning efficiently with an amazingly low overhead cost—less than 4 per cent.—has disbursed $60,000,000 of American bounty and saved 1,000,000 lives.

In its 179 orphanages are 100,000 children.

At a time when famine is sweeping the overcrowded Transcaucasian country its funds have run so low that it not only cannot extend its work, so pressingly desirable, but has been compelled to order a cut of 25 per cent.

This means 25,000 children turned out to die among hundreds of thousands of perishing adults.

To save these children, a committee of prominent women, of which Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt is chairman, is making a Lenten sacrifice appeal. Sponsorship booklets, each representing the life of a child ($5 a month, $60 a year) have been sent to women's organizations throughout the country.

Please send contributions to Women's Emergency Committee, Near East Relief, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, chairman, No. 151 Fifth avenue, New York city.

Defeat for Loan Sharks

The Legislature has just defeated the proposal to raise the interest rates on small loans. There was a good deal of hardihood in making the proposal and the way the credit unions and the American Legion rallied in opposition to the scheme insured its defeat.

It was rather audacious in the presence of a falling market to ask for an increase of the rate of interest which is already 36 per cent. per year. But the loan sharks are nothing, if not audacious.

Somebody's Birthday

Copyright, 1922, by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

IF born today you should be a true friend and a joyous comrade and your success in life will come to you very largely through your ability to surround yourself with loyal natures.

You have both personal magnetism and psychic intuition, and you should seek to find yourself a vocation in which you can apply these qualities to their fullest usefulness. Fame awaits you in public life if only you can acquire the intellectual concentration which will alone can give you.

Today is in general one of extremely doubtful women. You should take no important steps in anything before 8 p. m., after which time the portents are unusually good for general business.

Your ensuing year will bring you many temptations in the form of gay friendships and some with the opposite sex.

A child born today will be responsive and affectionate and should have a talent for music.

Augustus Sillman — Financier.

Samuel B. Ruggles—Lawyer.

BIDDING IN AUCTION BRIDGE

By S. S. Carvalho

ARTICLE II.

Preliminaries to Discussion

IN order to bid intelligently the player should have some knowledge of the relation of hands to each other and the trick values of high cards. The first of these is readily acquired—the latter is more difficult. Cards have combination values as well as individual values. Both vary with conditions.

There are, however, some card values fixed by averages and experience, that have become standard. For instance, an Ace may be reckoned as one sure trick. An Ace King of the same suit, two sure tricks. King, Queen, one sure trick, because if the Ace takes one the other remains highest. A King, guarded by one or two small cards. Is counted as half a trick, because it stands to lose as many times as to win, depending upon whether the adverse Ace is on the left or right. A Queen or Queen Jack, guarded is of doubtful value, owing to the uncertainty of a suit going around three times untrumped. In a No Trump hand they may be reckoned on. Here are some standard values of high cards.

Ace, King = 2 tricks
Ace, Queen, Jack = 2 tricks
King, Queen, Jack = 2 tricks
Ace, Queen, Ten = 1½ tricks
King, Queen, Ten = 1½ tricks
A'e, Jack, x = 1½ tricks
Ace, Queen, x = 1 trick
Ace, Jack, x = 1 trick
King, Queen, x = 1 trick
King, Jack, x = ½ plus
King, x, x = ½ trick
Queen, Jack, x = ½ trick.

Small cards are more or less valuable, depending upon conditions. When Trumps, they are always valuable. Their difference in Trump suits and plain suits is illustrated this way:

A Trump suit with Ace, King and five small is worth six tricks. A Trump suit with Ace, King and one small is worth two tricks. A plain suit with Ace, King and five small may be worth only one trick. A plain suit with Ace, King and one small is worth two tricks. The reason for the difference is that the high cards of a plain suit with many small are liable to be trumped.

In a No Trump hand, when the suit is established the small cards in it become trick makers. The same plain suit conditions also exist in a Trump hand after the Trumps have been exhausted. The blank suit or Singleton with Trumps for ruffing is always counted on for one or more tricks in any hand but the Declarer's.

Uncertain cards in a player's hand, while weak by themselves, taken in combination with those of his partner, may become sure trick winners. For instance, the Declarer holds King, Jack and two small, the average value of which by themselves is less than one trick. His partner holds Ace, Queen. This lifts their collective value to four tricks.

The position of the player also affects the value of his cards, as may be illustrated by a King with an adverse Ace on his right or on his left, making the King worth one t ck or nothing at all.

ARE YOU A PROCRASTINATOR?

What about that little job you have been putting off for days—maybe weeks?

When the thought comes to you that you ought to get to work on it, you begin to make excuses to yourself, and the work is left undone.

By waiting you are not lessening the effort required to get the job done, neither are you able to reduce the time it will take to perform it.

Then why do you put it off?

In all probability you are putting off other jobs, feeling that this or that matter should come first.

So you go along, delaying many things you have to account for eventually.

All through life you have been operating on this "put-it-off" principle.

Haven't you seen the folly of it yet?

You are putting off the savings habit also, waiting till some future time when it won't be any easier than it is at present.

Putting off the study you need to fit yourself for a better place along your own line of work, till someone else will win have the inside track for the job which might be yours if you were prepared.

How long will you drift?

Disabled Service Men's Store

Editor Boston American:

In the opening of a store for the sale of articles made by the disabled ex-service men of Massachusetts, the Women's Auxiliary of the American Legion have taken a step that well deserves the support of the people of the State.

The opening of this store offers to the disabled man receiving vocational training an opportunity to sell the articles that he makes, and thereby increase an income which, in many instances, is insufficient.

Massachusetts is the first State to take this step, and the new store, located at No. 448 Boylston street, which opened Monday, is only the first of what the auxiliary of the Legion hopes will be a series of similar stores.

Aside from the financial advantages which will accrue to the disabled men, as a result of this movement, is the fact that deeds take the place of words, which, after all, does more to encourage the unfortunate victims of the war than oratory or poetry.

HAPPINESS OF FRIENDS SWEETENS LIFE

By Winifred Black

Copyright, 1922, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.

THERE they were in the streaming sunshine of early, early Spring—the two little girls next door, all in their fresh, pretty frocks that can go into the washtub and come out as fresh and dainty as ever.

But over the little wash frocks each wore a charming little coat of Chinese make, one bright green and one of strange, vivid red—for the Spring air, which was so soft and caressing in the sunshine, was chill in the shade.

Each little girl had her curly hair tied up with a big bow of ribbon—one apple green and one bright red.

They were sitting inside a "little play fence" which had been set up round them on the broad porch.

One was rocking her dolly to sleep, and the other, with great pains and infinite care, was spreading the counterpane on the doll's bed.

At the Bottom

How she tucked it in at the bottom. How she folded it over at the top and then—how proudly she stood back and put her head on one side and bragged to herself about her neatness and dispatch.

Even Freda, the golden-haired maid, never made a bed more quickly or more neatly.

On the hill opposite the house, on the steps of which the little girls were playing, stood a frowning old castle — or at least, it looks like one.

No one lives in the castle—no one ever can live there.

Something always seems to drive them away—sometimes it is the loss of money and sometimes it is that worse trouble than either—family discord.

But the little girls know nothing about this. They love the old castle-like house with its frowning walls and heavy doors, and they play that one of them is married and lives over there and has come to visit her poor little sister, who lives in a house with only two servants and just one front door.

They were deep in the play as I passed this morning.

"Princess," said the "poor" little sister, "you never have to make beds in your castle, do you?"

"No," said the princess, tossing her apple-green bow—and then her face fell a little enviously.

"But I wish I did," she said wistfully.

But you see there was only one bed in the little playhouse set, so somebody had to be a princess—and never make beds at all.

For Lifetime

Dear little princess—I wonder if you will keep on with your brave little camouflage as long as you live.

Apple Green looked up as I passed and waved her little hand gleefully as I went up the hill.

"Good-by," she called, in a high, clear voice that was like the note of a robin. "Good-by—have a happy time."

Bright Red looked up from her doll—and she, too, waved me down the hill.

"Good-by," she called. "Have a happy time."

And as far as I could hear them, they called back to me, and their voices were like the voices of happy birds, singing in an apple orchard in full bloom on a gay Spring morning.

"Good-by—have a happy time." From what loving hearts came that salutation and that farewell.

Ex Libris

By Zoe B. Faber

QUITE casually, the other day, we picked up an old copy of Kipling's "Mine Own People," just to see how the Kipling of 1899 compares with the men who are writing at rather a furious rate today. He won the argument!

The people who today are writing, or can write, short stories that have the touch of the artist's brush that is so evident in all these stories, can be numbered no less than the fingers of one hand.

Just glancing over a few, there are "The Recrudescence of Imray," "Bimi," "Without Benefit of Clergy," "The Man Who Was" and "Namgay Doola." "Namgay Doola" is, to our mind, one of the most delightful short stories that we know.

Pointing in the other direction from sheer worthlessness like the last mentioned, there is "The Mark of the Beast," which is a tale that we have read over and over again and each time felt all the horror, the disgust, the great pity that the story excites for the leper's victim.

Just for those who have bewailed the change that has come over Rudyard Kipling's writing of the last few years, we want to put in the request that they take up again this collection and see if, instead of unfavorable criticism for the new, they cannot realize once more the spell of the old Kipling.

STUFF THAT MULES AND MEN ARE MADE OF

By Dr. Charles Fleischer

A MAN is infinitely better than a mule. Probably you have heard it said of a mule, that the lowly beast has neither pride of ancestry nor hope of posterity. This hybrid animal's parents are a horse and an ass. And the mule is sterile.

Not much of a past and still less of a future!

As for man, he loves to link himself to a worthy ancestry; and, if he has foresightful wisdom, he has at least a rudimentary pride in his posterity.

Hence the common garden variety of proudly fond grandparents.

In America, we have not made very much of ancestors; unless you live in Boston or Philadelphia.

To be sure, we have such orders as Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution. And it must be a source of stimulating satisfaction to feel that your folks took part in the freeing of the American Colonies and the liberation of mankind.

Especially, if such relationship inspires you, as freeman, still to play the part of the liberator, wherever and however you can—even in America.

Obligation of Nobility

Though you are not responcible for your family's past, you are fortunate if it is of such quality as to impose upon you the obligation of nobility.

If it is not, then You can begin a new line of ancestry.

One will not be suspected of disrespect if one says that, even better than to be a Son or Daughter of the American Revolution it is to be a member of the Society of Parents of Human Evolution.

No, dear reader, such a society does not exist. But, certainly, it would be well for America and the race, if increasing numbers of us constituted ourselves informally as self-elected members of such a growing group.

Even if you are unmarried, or childless though married, you may join this world-wide society.

Proverbially, bachelor men and maids make the best parents—in their minds! And that is what we want, the development of that state of mind which will give us a proudly responsible attitude toward posterity.

They t ll a story of a certain Frenchman of humble family who found himself one day in the midst of a group of men boasting about their respective ancestors. He felt embarrassed and humbled, until his self-respect inspired him, as he thought of his fine children, to lift his head and to say proudly: "I, too, am an ancestor!"

That is an attitude which each American of us should emulate; that spirit of hope towards posterity, based upon our belief in the human stuff.

We are all ancestors, makers of the forthcoming humanity.

Suppose you ask yourself what you would like to inherit, from your parents and the more distant past, if you could present an effective demand upon your ancestry.

Please do not be trivial and say "Money." You would be a poor fool not to be pitied if you were simply born rich, as however, since this is your chance to wish, we shall allow you to be born a millionaire, with the prior inheriting wealth to the better choice of earning it.

By this time, you have a sufficiently profound sense of values to ask for more than money. Doubtless, you want self-respect and courage, common sense and goodwill. All of which would give you belief in yourself and the other fellow.

Basis for Democracy

Such traits, if made general, would furnish a wonderful spiritual basis for democracy.

Well, then, if those qualities are a desirable heritage for you, they would be equally desirable for the future of which You are the parent.

It may be a bit mystical to suggest it, but our qualities, for better and for worse, get out into the air and make a sort of "atmosphere," even more distinctly felt than sun and fog and wind and weather.

They can affect our inner comfort or discomfort.

Individual men and women, let us say, do not seem to differ much in New York and Boston. And yet how different the "atmosphere" of the two cities!

So, you see, your community and your country and their future are as much and as definitely affected by your personal qualities as any children that you might have would be influenced by inheriting these or living in their spiritual setting.

Hence it is quite literally true that the hope of posterity lies in our worthy parentage, our spiritual parentage, whether or not it is also physical.

And the young child cannot too early be taught that it, too, must face the responsibility of being an ancestor.
